Over 10,000 Shares are already taken up.

This Company is being re-formed mainly on account of its having grown to be such a large undertaking that the original promoters find themselves forced to widen the scope of the Company, and prefer, if possible, to get the increased number of shares distributed among a large body of the public, thereby ensuring a large number of customers, who will, of course, have the first preference in the disposal of the produce; and, with this object in view, have made the capital of the Company £20,000, in 20,000 shares, the same as the original one, for convenience only.

The object of the Company is to take over the present Company's right to purchase that magnificent property known as Broadwater Park, situated about half-a-mile from the General Post Office, on the Main Logan road, containing 412 acres, and having two and a half miles frontage to Brisbane Creek, known at this point as Breakfast Creek, on account of the immense size and depth of the waterholes, which are at the least fresh water; and, further securing, if thought advisable, 276 acres immediately on the other side of the Creek, thus giving the Company a double water frontage of two miles, with a stock of 750 acres, one of the finest properties in the Moreton District for a dairy and Poultry Farm, and within the suburbs of the city of Brisbane.

The present Company, since assuming the lease with right of purchase from the present owners, have spent in cash, as per books of the Company (see Auditor's Report attached), £3,115 2s 2d, and as the money expended they are prepared to take the amount already invested in fully paid-up shares in the new Company, and each contributor here by the signing of the undertaking that they have to subscribe agreed to take up £500 contributory shares of the value pro rata in the gold.

DAIRY.—To commence with, a stock of 50 cows will be kept; the number will be increased as the cows of land brought under irrigation in tillage. A large cow yard, fitted with the latest improvements, has just been erected at a cost of about £300; also outhouses fit for a large Dairy, fitted and well ventilated, with cooling apparatus; also, 12-stall Stable, with harness-room and curt alcove.

The improvements on the property have all been carried out under the immediate supervision of Mr. THOMAS WARLOW, the Managing Director, and himself the largest shareholder, he has taken up 2,000 Shares since the Company was first formed, which he will continue to hold in the projected Company, and the Provisional Directors can confidently state that no individual has the more been and said, that the every £1 expended, £1 of value has been added to the property.

IRRIGATION.—Much attention and study has been paid to this subject. Broadwater Park is especially adapted for irrigation, and if necessary, the whole property could be brought under it, for the immediate outlay of a small sum, a supply of at least 20,000 gallons an hour for hours, control, which is capable of irrigating 10 acres, and this, which is almost ready for cultivation. We do not intend to grow vegetables and green fodder, and will be sufficient for the present stock of 50 cows, with the grass land adjoining.

The Tender for erecting the Dairy is now being executed.

POULTRY.—The largest working Poultry Farm in Australia is already established, and it produces a champion Brahmas, selling 1,000 eggs, and in the meantime hatch, and more especially, two more of new laying fowls, selling, very substantially reared, & up, including and weaned, pullet, cockerel, breeding, and fattening purposes. Each pullet has horses, well ventilated, of the latest American design, and 12,000 birds can be reared and sold yearly, when in full working order.

The stock at present consists of about 1,100 full-grown birds, exclusive of chickens, a large proportion of which are even bred from imported Ova, which have cost as high as £25 each. A very large demand exists throughout the country for this class of birds, but the company's stand point will be from table poultry and eggs, the demand for which is very great.

Eggs.—Eggs will be sold in a large scale, and record kept on a registered one, the object to be made from by forming on the American principle some thousands. A large paddock of 20 acres will be main egg pond, and will be subdivided into paddocks.

Vegetables.—About 10 acres will be laid out in vegetables, and irrigated. Everything is now ready to commence immediately operations, and there is fine wood land, with strawberry, vegetables etc., and have been, grown of such quality and in such quantity that will enable the company to successfully compete with the Chinese gardens, the largest of which adjoins Broadwater Park.

Soil.—The soil, though not heavy, is a sandy loam, especially suitable for irrigation, and almost every vegetable has been already tried on a small scale with the greatest success.

Depot.—As soon as the business is sufficiently developed, a Depot will be opened in Brisbane for the retailing of all produce from the farm—with a retail selling dairy attached.

Grazing.—Above 40 acres have been cleared and stumped and fit below the surface. 12 acres have also been ploughed, and a great improvement is already seen in the grass. The manure of the property will be sufficient for the purpose.

Coal.—Coal is known to exist on Broadwater Park. A bore has been put down only 100 feet, and a special seam of 6ft. thickness struck. These deposits will, no doubt, eventually be worked. A spherical information, that has been passed through, and the geologist under whose superintendence the bore went down, strongly recommended starting bituminous and shipping it, and the burning than. This will be a matter for future consideration.

Quite recently, an anthracite of excellent has been found and tested, and pronounced by Mr. Outrim, mining contractor, of extreme quality. Samples can be seen at the Exchange, and when the very good proximity of this property to town is considered, these deposits of coal, clay, and freestone must eventually become a very valuable source of income, even if let on a royalty.

Improvements (erected and being erected).—There is a new five-roomed house, new dairy, cow shed, dairy, stables, two miles of fill, wire netting paddocks, for fowl houses, bandstand house, nearly the whole property substantially fenced and subdivided with three-rail fences.

The amount expended, including present contracts in hand and not yet completed, is about £3,115 2s 2d, the correctness of which will be certified to by the books of the company. £2,000 2s 2d of this amount is paid, and, as before stated, will be taken up fully paid-up shares, the balance contracted in cash, &c., on a liability which must be taken over by the new company when formed. The present shareholders receive no preference or promoters' shares, accepting all fully paid-up share for each £1 spent.

VALUE OF THE PROPERTY.—The price to be paid to the lessee by the present Company whose right the new Company take over is £1,000 for the 412 acres, 1000 of which was represented by plant, has been paid, and included in the £2,115 17s 6d, leaving £500. The lease for two and a half years, with right to purchase at the rate of lease for £500, has been secured of portions 96, 184, 185, 271 and 272, containing 276 acres, at a rental of about £50 per annum, with purchasing right at £1500. It cannot implicitly.

The property adjoining Broadwater Park, at the back, has been valued by Mr. Arthur Martin, Sub-Inspector, late Government Valuator, at £15 per acre, or only 1 have often the price to be paid for Broadwater Park; and which is the very close proximity to town is considered—being only seven miles from the General Post Office, and in one of the healthiest and prettiest suburbs of Brisbane—and, also, that extensive subdivisions have been subdivided and sold right on the Broadwater Park gates, and ten miles beyond, and realised £50 per acre, the certain increase in value of this property is evident.

The road is, without doubt, the best part of Brisbane; the locality is especially suitable for Sub-urban villa sites; and the Company having about four miles of Government road frontage under subdivisions, subdivide this into Sub-urban villa blocks, without in any way interfering with the farm or water.

A profit of over 20 per cent. on the capital of £20,000, in addition to certain yearly increase in value of the property.

The Directors report that in the short space of a prospectus details cannot be larger entered into, and every information will be supplied by the Managing Director, Mr. THOMAS WARLOW, any of the Provisional Directors, or Mr. HENRY CHAPMAN, 141, Sussex-street, Sydney, who has personally inspected the property, and opportunities given to intending shareholders to inspect. They would particularly point out the long-felt want this Company will supply, and the absolute certainty of not only large profits, but certain increase in the value of the Shares.

200 acres within the suburbs of Brisbane, with some of the finest stores of pure fresh water in the Moreton district, must become immensely valuable, some of the lakes being said to be 100 feet deep. Moreton Railway Station, and Goods shed is within one and a half miles. They would also particularly draw attention to the easy terms of payment—10 Shares—5s on application, 5s on allotment, and 5s on a month; and larger numbers in proportion.

It is within 40 minutes' drive from Queen-street, on the best and prettiest road out of Brisbane. Brisbane Shareholders have thus the opportunity of driving out any afternoon and watching the progress of the Company.

The Plan of the property attached is correctly drawn to scale.

PROSPECTUS
NEW CHUM GOLD-MINING COMPANY, Limited,
CROYDON, QUEENSLAND.
[To be registered under the Companies Act of 1874.]

CAPITAL, £50,000, in 50,000 shares of £1 each, of which 15,000 shares fully paid up are retained by the present proprietors. 10,000 contributing shares issued as paid up to 5s each are now offered to the public on the following terms, viz., 2s 6d per share on application; 2s 6d on allotment; balance in calls not to exceed 1s per share per month.

BANKERS:
Commercial Banking Company of Sydney.

SOLICITOR:
Messrs. Rutherford and Son, Castlereagh-street, Sydney.

BROKERS:
Messrs. T. J. Thompson and Sons, Elder-chambers, 84, Pitt-street.

OBJECTS OF THE COMPANY.
This Company is now being formed to purchase and develop two claims upon the New Chum line of reef, Croydon Tenders Mine, Croydon, Northern Queensland, known as the PROSPECTOR AND No. 6M and No. 1 North, consisting 600 feet on the line of reef, by 600 feet wide.

Captain James Dunstan (late of the Great Cobar Copper Mine) and Mr. G. W. Stone, whose reports are herein appended, report very favourably of these claims.

The reef averages 5 feet wide, and is estimated to contain 2½ in oz. of gold to the ton. Two shafts have been sunk on the reef, one 60 and the other 30 feet deep, the stone from which, under 20 tons, returns at grass, and dressed finish. The shafts are 300 feet apart, and the reef has the same characteristics and quality in both, plan attached.

The purchase money required is £3000 cash, and 15,000 shares, fully paid up.

It is proposed to erect a 10-head battery, with first-class quartzing appliances attached, on the claims, which, if proved, will prove a constant source of profit to the company, as large quantities of quartz are now at all times available, crushing machinery belonging to other mine owners, and contracts could now be entered into wherein more for other claims. The mine now being paid to 30s per ton, besides extra charges for grinding, which would yield a good margin on the estimated cost.

The line of reef has now been traced up for 1½ mile in length, and the only crushing so far obtained, taken from the Boxallie claim of the association, yielded 2Oz. 12dwt. 7gr. 6dr. 1dwt. of stone, or equal to nearly 1oz. per ton.

It will be necessary to construct a dam, or one, to obtain sufficient water for crushing purposes before the wet season sets in.

The estimated cash capital required is £10,000, and is as follows, viz.:—

|---|---|
| Purchase money | £3000 |
| Cost of 10-head crushing battery | 3000 |
| Cost of dam | 500 |
| Developing mine | 3000 |
| Contingencies, say | 500 |
| | £10,000 |

and the amount it is proposed to raise by the issue of 25,000 shares of £1 each. It is expected that not more than 5s per share will be required.

We might give an exhaustive account of the resources of the wonderful Goldfield, but the limits of a prospectus will not hold of it. The facts of the Croydon Goldfield speak for themselves, and the more increasing, and machinery for crushing is erected, only then will the great natural capabilities of the Croydon Goldfield be made known.

The cost of brokerage, advertising, printing, &c., will form a first charge upon the Company's assets.

Application for shares must be made in the undersigned, who will allot the shares pro rata. If, however, the Company shall fail to float the application money will be returned in full.

Report of Captain James Dunstan on the Prospecting Area and No. 1 North New Chum line of Reef, Croydon.

"Croydon,
"September 3, 1887.

"I beg to hand you my Report on the P. A. and No. 1 North on New Chum line of reef.

"This property is situated about ten miles N.E. from Croydon, on a ridge near Tenderness Creek, and consists of the prospecting block No. 6M, which has 400 feet along the reef by 600 feet wide, and No. 1 North, north of and adjoining the P. A., 200 feet along the reef by 600 feet wide. These two blocks are practically contiguous on an area of 600 feet by 400 feet on a depth of 30 feet.

"The property is at present held under mineral rights, but in January next it can be certified into a lease from the Government, under the usual conditions.

"The lead which is going down nearly vertical, cuts out nearly the whole length of the 600 feet, and varies in width along the surface from 6 inches to 3 feet. Three shafts have been sunk down on the reef to a depth of 30 feet, and 11 feet in the south-east of the Broken Hill, in the parallel of shafts, and 20 feet, and 42 feet. The reef in the 42 feet shaft for the first 25 feet between 11 feet 6 inches and 3 feet, varies not to 2 feet in width, continuous to the bottom. In the 30 feet shaft the reef for the first 15 feet is 2 feet 6 inches, and then opens out to a width of 3 feet, and continues this width for the remaining 15 feet. In the 6 feet shaft the width is 18 inches rising from the surface to the bottom. The reef in the 30 feet shaft has been so far fully tested, and contains 2 pennyweights of gold to the ton, and the 42 feet shaft is in the quartz very much intersected with branches, throughout which gold is freely seen. As you will see by samples, I forward, Samples of stone taken from the outcrop, crushed and prospected by me, show this stone to be fully rich in the gold, and the parts from the bottoms of the two deepest shafts show fully the same. The country, which consists of granite, is favourable for working, and the mine can be cheaply and speedily opened out. From present appearances the reef bids fair to decide that it will continue down, and, as the property is on a ridge, there is no danger of being interrupted by water until a depth of at least 300 feet has been reached, and I therefore consider quartz crushing will be carried on for a long time without water. There are about 70 tons of quartz at grass, about 1 ridge from the opening, and, with fuel fully fair per ton, gold obtained at 3d per ton. No doubt a 10 head battery would be a better form for claim. The fact, although named "The New Chum," is a certain indication of that named the "Boxallie," a claim situated about a third of a mile to the south, a crushing of 60 tons from which yielded 10oz. 14dwt. of gold, valued at £4 per ounce. The Boxallie proved, as well as that north on the New Chum, lateral lines taken up.

"For the economical working of these claims I should recommend the erection of a 10-head crushing battery, with suitable gold-saving appliances, at an outside cost of £3000 on the claims. There is a good and suitable site available, about ½ mile from the claim, with an abundance of water in the wet season. To provide and secure a plentiful supply of water all the year round a dam would have to be constructed, and this, I believe, would cost about £300. As a line of reef is taken up for over ½ mile in length, and other reefs are being worked in its immediate neighbourhood, the battery would prove a substantial source of revenue to the company by crushing for the public which had running on the company's claim. The price per ton now being paid for crushing is 8s; and extra charges for labour a gratifying gain, and this shows large and profitable margin.

"A good supply of timber, both for mining purposes and fuel, can be obtained cheaply in the immediate vicinity of the claims.

"In conclusion, I consider that this is a good and bona-fide property, and with the erection of the proposed battery will pay good dividends upon the capital invested.

"I am, yours faithfully,
"CAPT. JAMES DUNSTAN,
"Late Manager Great Cobar Copper Mine."

Report of Mr. G. W. Stone on the Prospecting area, No. 1 North New Chum line of Reef, Croydon.

"Croydon,
"5th September, 1887.

"In accordance with your request, I herewith submit my report on the Gold Quartz Reef property as follows:—

"The property is situated about 10 miles north of Croydon, and consists of two blocks, namely, Prospecting area, 600 feet by 400 feet, and No. 1 North, adjoining the P. A., 200 feet by 400feet, making in all one feet along the line of reef, by 800 feet wide.

"The reef, which is vertical, and running north and south, crops out the whole length of the property.

"Two (2) vertical shafts, about 200 feet apart, have been sunk on the reef. The one in the northern block to a depth of 42 feet, cutting a well-defined reef, varying from 3 feet down to 6 inches in width, and realised 25 pennyweights of gold to the ton. The other shaft, in the southern block has been sunk vertically to a depth of 30 feet, and exposes the reef the whole depth similar to that in the northern one, and about 20 tons of stone have been raised, of which stone yielded freely. The value of the 70 tons of stone now at grass have been taken from the sinking of the shafts, and, I believe, from prospects raised by dollying, that the will crush at the rate of 2oz. per ton.

"The reef, which carries two well-defined walls of soft granite, may be easily worked, and from present appearances has every indication of permanency. As it is situated on a hill, no water may be expected for 100 or 150 feet, and plentiful machinery will be required, which will be cheap and easy to erect.

"The line of reef has been traced up, and is now working for about one and a half miles, and the only difficulty seen from the Boxallie at the southern end—yielded 2Oz. 12dwt. 7dwt. 6dwt. 1dwt. of stone.

"Yours faithfully,
"G. W. STONE."

GRANVILLE S. PRICE, 16, Collins-street West, Melbourne.

The Company is formed to purchase from the present proprietors, and to take tenure the leased property known as "Maidenshire," on the Rockwell Paddock, consisting of three sections, No. 1, 2, and 11, all the above Barger's Ranges, south-east of the Broken Hill, in the parish of Sandstone, county of Yantabulla, Barrier Range, New South Wales, of which a sketch plan is herein annexed.

Public attention has been so long fixed upon these sections (the time selected on the Rockwell field) and so high a general opinion has formed of their value by those who have seen them that it is not considered necessary for us to add any further recommendation to the following statements from the Presidents of the Mine Managers' Association, Broken Hill:

"Broken Hill, 9th September, 1887.

"To the Promoters of "The Maiden Shire Mining Company, No Liability,
"Rockwell Paddock.

"Gentlemen,—I have carefully inspected the property under your control, and am very favourably impressed with its value as a medium for bonafide investment of capital. Throughout the entire length of blocks Nos. 1 and 2, two large, well-defined lode outcrops, running parallel, traverse your property. These lodes will average 7 feet wide.

"In the eastern one, near the southern boundary, a shaft has been sunk to a depth of 27ft.—in the lode 12ft.—from which an ore of a very promising character was brought, composed of iron, silicated copper and quartz, and assaying 7oz. of silver per ton. In the various prospecting pits sunk in different parts of the property, ore is found of the same promising character, highly charged with grey and blue carbonates of copper, one of the best indications for silver in this district.

"On a point about the centre of the northern block, a shaft has been sunk to a depth of 20ft., on a rich of stock-working one about 3ft. wide, from which assays have been taken up to 30oz. to the ton. A shaft has also been sunk 30ft. on a large eastern lode, composed of copper-stained quartz and gossan, the whole of which is of a promising character. I also noted the outcrop of two large lodes on block 11, at present unproved, of which the surface indications are very promising indeed.

"I have no hesitation in expressing my opinion that this property will prove a remunerative one, requiring only capital to develop its value.

"I am, Gentlemen,
"Your obedient servant,
"W. H. MORGAN,
"Mine Manager.

"Central Broken Hill Silver-mining Company, No Liability."

The present owners will be ready to take tenure for calls with the subscribers, and a share will be reserved in the registration of the Company, allotting the calls as fed per share per month.

Shares will be allotted in order of priority, with the right being reserved to reduce all applications over 100 shares to that number, and the list closed immediately on their subscription.

A preliminary meeting of the shareholders will be summoned as soon as possible after allotment, for the consideration of rules and regulations, appointment of directors, and other necessary business.

ENGLISH GOSSIP.

(FROM OUR SPECIAL COMMISSIONER.)

LONDON, AUG. 18.

The gay world is on its travels. Some strugglers from the tents of Vanity Fair still remain in town. Those and others of Her Majesty's subjects are rejoicing in the first heavy downpour of rain which has been experienced in these latitudes for many weeks. Except in one outlying district there has been no shortness of water in the metropolis, but in many parts of the country the drought has been very serious, and it is believed to have started many great fires which have been destructive to buildings, as well as to crops and forest trees. The destruction of Whiteley's famous house of business in Westbourne Grove, a populous neighbourhood near Hyde Park, is believed to have been the work of an incendiary. It is the fifth fire Mr. Whiteley, who calls himself "the Universal Provider," has had to encounter. On the two last occasions he was not insured, the offices considering his risk exceptional. His fourth fire entailed a loss of over £100,000, and the one which has just occurred will not be repaired under a cost of £500,000. Mr. Whiteley's place is one of universal business. There is hardly a trade that is not represented on his premises, and his prices as a rule are more moderate than those of other tradesmen. For three reasons he is very unpopular among the smaller tradesmen, and he is said to have many active enemies among persons whose businesses have been ruined by the competition which the Universal Provider has set up. It is suggested that his fires are the result of a conspiracy among these people. On the other hand, it is said "there is a woman in the case." Mr. Whiteley himself has no doubt upon the question of incendiarism, and it is reported that very positive evidence has been obtained in support of his views. Several persons were killed during the fire, some being crushed, others burned. Whiteley is the largest concern of the kind in the world. The Magasin de Laurre in Paris, an imitation of it, is larger in every way, and I have seen nothing in American equal to it. The premises will be rebuilt as quickly as possible. It is believed that Whiteley has in the concern several powerful capitalists as the limited partnership principle, including one of the Rothschilds and Mr. Labouchere.

The Queen goes to Balmoral on the 24th. Scotland has had several days of heavy rain. The grouse are plentiful. This does not seem to reduce the price of the birds in the London market, where they are selling at from 3s. to 3½s. a brace. The Duchess of Albany leaves to-day for Holland. She is going to visit her sister the Queen of the Netherlands, at the chateau of Soestdijk, near Utrecht, where the King and Queen are now sojourning. Utrecht is a quaint, pretty little city. I spent some time there a few years ago. You can see almost all Holland from the church tower, where the authorities have allowed a telescope to be fixed for the use of visitors. It is hardly an exaggeration to say that on a fine day you can see all the King's interesting dominions through this telescope. The Crown Prince of Germany is still in this country. He left Buckingham Palace last week for Scotland. Dr. Morell Mackenzie having ordered him bracing air. He is much better both in his general health and as regards the affection of the throat which at one time was regarded with the greatest apprehensions. All who have met the Prince speak in the most enthusiastic terms of his frank, kindly manner. He was the people's favourite throughout the jubilee festivities. He will remain in Scotland until the first week in September, when he goes to Potsdam to see his aged father, who proposes at about that time to go to Ischl-on-the-Danube. The court physicians at Berlin are not in very high favour just now. They would have permitted an operation to be performed upon the Crown Prince which would have made him a dumb man for the rest of his life. The Emperor would not give his consent until the English expert Mackenzie had been consulted, with what result is well known. His Imperial Majesty has obtained a new lease of life from his stay at Gastein, although his physicians absolutely prohibited the journey thither, as calculated to lead to the most complicated and serious consequences. The Emperor has sent a wonderful Jubilee gift to the Pope—a mitre studded with precious stones. By the way, the Pope's life, "from an authentic memoir furnished by his orders" is just published in England. It is a superb-looking volume. The political chapters are being much criticised, many particularly those which refer to the Papal policy as regards France and Ireland. It is curious to read a denunciation of Eugene Sue, Alexandre Dumas, Balzac, and George Sand, when it is remembered that a former Pontiff proposed to canonise Paul de Cock.

But even Paul de Cock never wrote more prurient pages than Walt Whitman. Perhaps it is because Whitman is impossible as a "cult" among decent people that the Pall Mall has taken him up, and been the chief medium of the support which the "Walt Whitman Society" is receiving on this side of the Atlantic. In commencing their scheme of a subscription for Whitman, which shall make him independent for the remainder of his life, the promoters wisely speak only of his volume Specimen American Days. They hinder it to the Pall Mall to gainsay his Leaves of Grass, which you will remember was once a prohibited book in the enlightened state of Massachusetts. Whitman's prose volume is not without merit. It deserves to rank high among American literature, but the "Leaves of Grass" is full of obscenity, and is one with affectations and literary eccentricities. For a time Swinburne was captured by the sonorous and animal virility of the old man, but latterly the Laureate of Pall Mall has "vomited" upon the house on behalf of grass. I met Whitman a year or two ago in America. He was living in a very humble way, content to be a modest, kindly man, was picturesque in appearance, a little like Lord Tennyson, but without the Laureate's fine masculine presence and strong, intellectual forehead. He is tall, wears his hair long, and is fond of sitting in the sun at his cottage door. I think that he quite appreciates or understands how nasty and mawkish are some of his lascivious and sensual stanzas in Birdes of Grass. Some years ago Mr. Swinburne was equally oblivious, or if not, was a critical approver and admirer of the American poet's work. But Swinburne himself has become more clearly in his subjects than was his wont, and has similar lore often offends alike the poet. It is natural, perhaps, that he should now view Whitman with less kindly eyes than when he was working in a similar line of country. At the same time it is rather late in the day for Swinburne to discover that his American contemporary is "unhealthily demonstrative," "obtrusively animal," that his Eve is "an drunken spitfire-woman," and his Venus "a Hottentot wench under the influence of adulterated rum."

The professed admirers of Walt Whitman are fond of alluding to him as a lover of nature; but we have just land in England not only a lover of nature but a true interpreter and recorder of all that is lovely and true and pure and beautiful in nature, and whose works, while they abound with the grace and poetry of a far higher order than Whitman's, contain neither word nor thought that is not in keeping with the pastoral sweetness of an ideal rural life. Poor Richard Jefferies, author of "The Gamekeeper at Home," "Hodge and his Master," "Amaryllis at the Fair," "Round about a Great Estate," "Wild Life in a Southern County," and many other delightful books, lies dead at his cottage near Goring, on the Thames. During the last six years he had been afflicted with a wasting disease, and his latest books were dictated to his wife. He leaves his widow and two children unprovided for. Here is a case for kindly aid, without going so far afield as America. Some critics speak of Jefferies as a modern White of Selborne, but those who know the country well regard Jefferies as a more exact observer. His writings are very picturesque studies of natural history, remarkable photographs of country life, true to every season; and in future ages they will be regarded as the most complete and reliable illustrations of the influence of education, steam, gas, and electricity on the men and manners of rural England.

There is evidence of more than usual activity in the literary world in view of the coming season. Macmillans will publish Alfred Austin's new satirical poem, "Lucifer" in October. They have also in the press four plays by Calderon, with introductory notes from the pen of Mr. Norman MacColl, editor of The Athenæum. Mr. Pollock, editor of The Saturday Review, is also making his appearance as an author, but Mr. Pollock confines himself to translations. He has already made his début as a dramatic adaptor from the French, and he is one of the collaborateurs in the new play which is being arranged for Mr. Beerbohm Tree. Messrs. Ward and Downey are a busy and enterprising firm. They have this week issued a cheaper edition of Stepniak's "Russia under the Tzars," translated by William Westall. "The Personal Recollections of the Duc de Broglie," "The Memoirs of an Arabian Princess," and the "Emperor William: the Study of a Great King and a Good Man," are among their leading announcements for the season. When Miss Olive Schreiner brings out her new novel—she is the author of "The Story of a South African Farm"—it will be the pioneer of a new method of publishing, the royalty fee being checked and controlled by a system of stamps invented by an American. Occult science is becoming once more the rage—if not in fact, certainly in literature. Mr. S. L. Mathers has translated the "Kabbala Denudata," which he will publish under the title of "The Kabbala Unveiled;" Madame Blavatsky's "Isis Unveiled" has no doubt given Mr. Mathers his cue. During the autumn, the first number of "Lucifer: A Theosophical Monthly," edited by Madame Blavatsky and Miss Mabel Collins, will be published by Redway, who has also in hand "The Real History of the Rosicrucians." The absurdity of any man being another's guide as to the reading of books is evidently not fully appreciated by the public, or we should not have the farce of "What to read" so frequently repeated as it is. The World is now recommending books for holiday reading, and some other paper has asked certain prominent men what books have influenced their work and actions. Nothing could be more awful than to set up a stereotyped system of selecting one's reading upon the opinions of the great men or the others. The poisonous nonsense in the well-read man. One of the most entertaining and instructive books of travel is "Paddy at Home," by the Baron E. de Mandat-Grancey, translated by A. P. Morton, and published by Chapman and Hall. It is full of racy anecdote and shrewd observation. It is not likely to be very popular with the friends of Mr. Parnell, but it is nevertheless an honest book, and it is always interesting to see ourselves as foreigners see us.

The Duke of Cambridge is not an unpopular man either with the regular army or the volunteers. At the same time he is not regarded as heroic. There was always an uncomfortable mystery about his sudden return from the Crimea, the truth at which the politely retiring member who has made the loudest boasts of "road and bridge" achievements has been unwilling to forego this favourite spice for country speeches, and has made it appear that the good things he had secured were in spite of a centralising system; and, in fact, the pure result of his own diligence and overwhelming influence.

Now this interesting little parcel of figures has been compiled and struck off to show that the theory about the city getting the lion's share of public works expenditure is largely a matter of country candidates' imagination. Possibly we have to thank the separatists of the Northern districts for the light we have thus secured; and in acknowledging this the fact must not be overlooked that these would be disappointed if the members of our snugly planned territory are not by any means representative. In fact, they resent the cleverness of the Premier in fortifying himself with such a document before venturing amongst them. They had laid aside their weapons of warfare for the moment to join with the most ardent anti-separationists in giving the Premier a welcome. If, all the while, they cherished a hope of working upon his sympathies and so more effectually securing his conversion to their views, their disappointment must have been all the greater when he so adroitly turned the tables upon them. They had been warning their governors of being behind the door when the public moneys were distributed; and he told them, in effect, that they had been petting for more than their share. What was more, he insisted that there could be no mistake about it, for the comparison extended over the ample space of 27 years, and the figures had been taken from the public records by the Government Statistician, an authority whose impartiality ought to be above all suspicion.

Since the people of the New England districts—including New England Gem Tom Hovell, Tamworth, and Tenterfield—have carried the question of metropolis versus country further than any other section of the community, the figures relating to their districts may be first looked at. For purely local works, New England, with a population of 93,325, received last year £55,159; while the metropolis, with a population of 392,700, received £107,806. For the whole 27 years covered by this document the New England district received for local works £849,475, and the amount expended in the metropolis for similar purposes was only £3,196,054.

Had the figures for expenditure on national works not been also given there might have been room for some suspicion that the foregoing figures were unreliable on the ground of the greater part of metropolitan expenditure being placed under the broader category. But the figures for national expenditure are also supplied in this document, and they afford the completest refutation of any such suspicion. During the 27 years the expenditure on national works in the New England district has reached the enormous total of £3,484,745 as against an expenditure of £4,006,304 in the metropolis.

When the expenditure in the metropolis is compared with that throughout the whole of the country districts, the old complaint of inequitable distribution is still more effectually answered. The expenditure of public money on local works throughout the country districts rises from £95,801, or 5s. 9d. per head of the population in 1869 to £808,629, or £1 6s. 8d. per head, in 1886. The amount expended for local works in the metropolis has risen from £21,216, or 5s. 5d. per head of the population in 1869, to £767,006, or £2 7s. 8d. per head last year. It ought to be noted, however, that last year's expenditure was not the highest either in the country or the metropolis. The country expenditure under this head was greater in 1885, when it amounted to £861,951, or £1 18s. 6d. per head. The metropolitan expenditure was highest in 1883, when it reached the large sum of £931,015, or £3 12s. per head.

Under the head of national works the expenditure in country districts has increased from £317,326, or £1 5s. 3d. per head, in 1869, to £1,908,152, or £2 19s. 1d. per head, in 1886. The metropolitan expenditure under the same head has risen from £23,604, or 5s. per head, in 1869, to £351,002, or £1 12s. 11d. per head, last year. The highest rate in relation to population was reached by the country expenditure in 1884, when it was £2,347,492, or £3 15s. per head; whilst in the metropolis the rate was slightly higher in 1887, though last year's expenditure was the highest in amount ever reached.

It should also be noted, in justice to the metropolitan side of the comparison in the matter of local expenditure, that the water supply, sewerage works, and tramways are included under the category of local works.

So long as this document is only used to set the people of the country districts right in the matter of alleged grievances against the city its revelations are full of interest. That the Premier does not mean to use it as an excuse for delaying legislation for local government or "decentralisation" is partly guaranteed by the introduction of his large-promised bill. The expenditure on public works has not been, it appears, so unevenly distributed as many people imagined; but it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that this is the result rather of good luck than of good guiding. The system of distribution, if system it can be called, has been full of haphazard. Each appropriation has depended very directly on the previous question as to what Government happened to be in power, what side of the House the member asking it sat upon, and how far he could reckon on the votes of fellow-members who might require his vote in return. But the changes of Government have been so frequent, and members too have been so accommodating in their political views, that every electorate has been sure of getting its day of favour, so that, given a fairly long period—and 27 years is surely long enough—and even the most haphazard of log rolling, road and bridge administration will result in something like an equitable partition of the spoils. But for all that, and this interesting document added, the sooner a local government or decentralising Act establishes a more rational system, the better it will be for city and country alike.

LAWYER HOFFOS'S CASE.—I wish to inform you, and through you all who are interested to know the fact, that a most dangerous and obstinate case of salt-rheum or eczema, which has been under my personal observation from its first appearance to the present time—about ten (10) years—covering the greater portion of the patient's body and limbs with its peculiar irritating and itching rash, and to which all use known methods of treating such disease had been applied without benefit, has completely disappeared, leaving a clean and healthy skin under a perfect application of the Cuticura Remedies. I can and do hereby advise all similarly afflicted to try the Remedy which has been so effectual in this case.—Chas. Houghton, Law Office, 36, State-street, Boston.—[ADVT.]

AT THE BONDI AQUARIUM.

BY VIATOR.

Forty minutes in the train brings one to the terminus at Bondi, and 10 minutes more, over a road at present not provocative of piety to the pedestrian troubled with those obtrusive callosities, known in the people's dictionary as corns, is sufficient to reach the aquarium at Bondi. The aquarium occupies the seaward half of Fletcher's Glen, a lovely and romantic little valley, somewhat to the right of Bondi Beach. The grounds include the pretty little beach of white sand at the extremity of the glen, upon which the blue, white-crested waves of the mighty Pacific dash themselves unceasingly in peace or wrath, as the will of the wind dictates. The spot is one extremely appropriate for an aquarium, on account of its marine surroundings and natural picturesqueness, and it is so close to the sea that if fish are gifted with the sense of hearing—a question upon which there appears to be opinions of a diametrically opposite nature—the finny captives at the aquarium can enjoy whatever pleasure lies in listening to the song of the waters whose broad dominions were once their home. A great deal of taste has been displayed in utilising the natural graces of the glen, and the attractions, beside those of the aquarium proper, are numerous enough. From various heights on the ground a magnificent view of the ocean can be obtained, and the many quaintly-built summer houses dotting the glen afford comfortable lolling places, in which to enjoy the superb panorama which any summer's day can summon up, with the ever present aids of cooee and clouds, and sea and sky.

A cool sound of gushing fountains, which is pleasantly refreshing after the heat of the sun, greets the visitor as he walks into the compartments, in which the fish may be viewed swimming complacently behind broad sheets of glass. Probably the eagle of the aquarium lies in that habit of the species, in particular so extensively practised among the Romans, of preserving certain exquisite fish in ponds for the purpose of supplying their tables at any moment, with fish fresh from the water. In such cases, doubtless, they kept their lovely fish which they allowed to die upon the table at their regret, the spectacle of its spasmodic changes in its last struggles in some subtle manner, lending only to the palate of the Roman connoisseur, furnishing a zest to the appetite with which it was afterwards devoured.

But this is by the way, however, no one will care to dispute the usefulness of an aquarium as a means of imparting lessons in natural history with a complete, new and pleasantness not to be found in the pages of books. It is not from books that we learn best and most. An hour's stroll through an aquarium, with an authority upon the habits and conformation of the finny inhabitants, would do more to open the eyes of a schoolboy than many weary hours spent over the most tersely written book upon the same subject. Those who have been accustomed to pursue the favourite pastime of good old Izaac Walton in the waters of Sydney harbour will recognise old acquaintances in nearly every one of the tenants of the aquarium. What boy is there who will not recognise in that little fish there the ubiquitous "yellow-tail," where capture with a common thread and a bent pin forms one of the sweetest stages in the fishing experiences of Sydney natives, to be afterwards known in manner days as an excellent bait for almost all kinds of fish. Many of these boys have caught it in the harbour, in size no larger than a sardine do not know that it will grow large into the open sea, and there attains the length of two feet! In the case containing these fish may be seen a solitary grave, relieving the gaiety of the spectacle with an aspect of deep meditation, indicative at interior thought profound enough to put to shame the deepest mental plunges of Plato or Kant. To discover the meditations agitating the breast of that grave would far surpass anything that the ingenuity of man ever compassed. To divine its thoughts or those who were raising outside would not be so difficult a matter, although one happily beyond the comprehension of the prawn. They were probably thinking of him—bedad.

In another case is contained, among other common enough fish, such as the tailor, whiting, and mullet—not the pretty sea-mullet, but the exciting species which inhabits our harbours and the brackish waters of our various rivers—several lobsters which were crawling over the bottom of the tank among the stones and rocks at the rear, with a slow motion reminding one altogether of some immense massive spider. It was rather amusing to watch the consternation the approach of these crustacea caused the other fish, the first intimation the latter often received of their advance being a thrust from one of the long prongs of the lobster, which appeared sufficient to put the disturbed fish to sudden and ignominious flight. There appeared to be something thrilling about the lobsters, which one felt sure, upon an inquiry, thus turned out to be correct. They were dead. There seems to be an altogether unwarrantable number of catfish in the aquarium. Almost every cage contains three or four of these repulsive looking creatures. They possess poisonous spines, and have an evil reputation, which their looks fully justify. Some years ago a blackfellow, who formed one of a fishing party in the harbour, was unlucky enough to be stung by one of these fish, and lost his hand through it. They are speckled with dirty brown spots on a dull yellow ground, shaped like an eel in the body, with a flattish head, having a big mouth and eyes projecting from it. They are not pleasant fish to look at, and are never eaten in Sydney, although they are pronounced on good authority to be of excellent flavour. There are various species of rays in the different cases, including the stingaree, or, as it is more frequently called, the stingaree. This fish, quietly as it rests on the floor of its species prison, is in the possession of a strong serrated spine, with which it can inflict an ugly and dangerous wound. One of the most curious fish to be seen here is the pelican-looking porcupine-fish, which is almost critical in shape, having large globular eyes, and a surface state full of spiny points—a circumstance from which it doubtless takes its name. This is also a poisonous fish. Through the water it appears as if fish is swimming in a very independent manner. It is flat, with several prominent pectoral and dorsal fins, and marked perpendicularly with three black stripes. This is the "old wife," a very common fish in our waters. How it got its curious name is a mystery, as there is nothing in its aspect to indicate any resemblance to a wife, young or old. Probably the fishermen who named it detected some characteristic which escapes the ordinary observer. It is always well to trust to the accuracy of fishermen in such matters. Fishermen have greater opportunities of studying the habits of fish than the general public, and their fish nomenclature generally indicates some marked characteristic of the fish. For instance, the cockle, solid-looking fish so called from its habit of shelling the rocks at flood tide in search of the molluscs which form its food, and for crushing the shells of which its powerful head and teeth are well adapted. At low water the cockle is for safety retreats. Epicures pronounce this fish excellent eating, the head and shoulders, properly boiled and seared, being pronounced the equal in delicacy of flavour of the prized turbot. A few years ago the cockle was no schnapper. Doubtless this king of the fishes of the Australian seas will not long be absent, as without it a fish collection would be incomplete.

In one of the cages, lying on the floor, is a dull flat fish of 3ft. or 4ft. in length, with a skin patterned somewhat like a carpet. This is a very formidable shark, known as the wobbegong—one of the full-vocabled appellations of the aboriginals. It is the pleasant habit of this monster to lie under overhanging rocks and among weeds, from which it can hardly be distinguished in colour, and to seize upon any prey, human or otherwise, that may unlucky pick up to come within its reach. However, it is harmless enough in its Bondi prison. Perhaps the most interesting and amusing of all the inhabitants of the aquarium are the seals. The amusement these people were attracted by these silly-looking creatures, whose strange cries and queer preposterous locomotion always seem to "bring down the house." A solitary seal occupies one tank, and a pair another. Doubtless, when a short time the number and variety of its inhabitants will be increased. As it is, the lover of nature will find much to interest him in its glades.

EXPENDITURE ON NATIONAL AND LOCAL WORKS.

This document relating to the above subject, which was laid upon the table of the Legislative Assembly by the Colonial Secretary on Wednesday evening, throws valuable light on a much debated question. Country electioneering brattles with the loudest charges against Governments in general of favouring the city at the expense of the country, and politicking members who has made the loudest boasts of "road and bridge" achievements has been unwilling to forego this favourite spice for country speeches, and has made it appear that the good things he had secured were in spite of a centralising system; and, in fact, the pure result of his own diligence and overwhelming influence.

Now this interesting little parcel of figures has been compiled and struck off to show that the theory about the city getting the lion's share of public works expenditure is largely a matter of country candidates' imagination. Possibly we have to thank the separatists of the Northern districts for the light we have thus secured; and in acknowledging this the fact must not be overlooked that these would be disappointed if the members of our snugly planned territory are not by any means representative. In fact, they resent the cleverness of the Premier in fortifying himself with such a document before venturing amongst them. They had laid aside their weapons of warfare for the moment to join with the most ardent anti-separationists in giving the Premier a welcome. If, all the while, they cherished a hope of working upon his sympathies and so more effectually securing his conversion to their views, their disappointment must have been all the greater when he so adroitly turned the tables upon them. They had been warning their governors of being behind the door when the public moneys were distributed; and he told them, in effect, that they had been petting for more than their share. What was more, he insisted that there could be no mistake about it, for the comparison extended over the ample space of 27 years, and the figures had been taken from the public records by the Government Statistician, an authority whose impartiality ought to be above all suspicion.

Since the people of the New England districts—including New England Gem Tom Hovell, Tamworth, and Tenterfield—have carried the question of metropolis versus country further than any other section of the community, the figures relating to their districts may be first looked at. For purely local works, New England, with a population of 93,325, received last year £55,159; while the metropolis, with a population of 392,700, received £107,806. For the whole 27 years covered by this document the New England district received for local works £849,475, and the amount expended in the metropolis for similar purposes was only £3,196,054.

Had the figures for expenditure on national works not been also given there might have been room for some suspicion that the foregoing figures were unreliable on the ground of the greater part of metropolitan expenditure being placed under the broader category. But the figures for national expenditure are also supplied in this document, and they afford the completest refutation of any such suspicion. During the 27 years the expenditure on national works in the New England district has reached the enormous total of £3,484,745 as against an expenditure of £4,006,304 in the metropolis.

When the expenditure in the metropolis is compared with that throughout the whole of the country districts, the old complaint of inequitable distribution is still more effectually answered. The expenditure of public money on local works throughout the country districts rises from £95,801, or 5s. 9d. per head of the population in 1869 to £808,629, or £1 6s. 8d. per head, in 1886. The amount expended for local works in the metropolis has risen from £21,216, or 5s. 5d. per head of the population in 1869, to £767,006, or £2 7s. 8d. per head last year. It ought to be noted, however, that last year's expenditure was not the highest either in the country or the metropolis. The country expenditure under this head was greater in 1885, when it amounted to £861,951, or £1 18s. 6d. per head. The metropolitan expenditure was highest in 1883, when it reached the large sum of £931,015, or £3 12s. per head.

Under the head of national works the expenditure in country districts has increased from £317,326, or £1 5s. 3d. per head, in 1869, to £1,908,152, or £2 19s. 1d. per head, in 1886. The metropolitan expenditure under the same head has risen from £23,604, or 5s. per head, in 1869, to £351,002, or £1 12s. 11d. per head, last year. The highest rate in relation to population was reached by the country expenditure in 1884, when it was £2,347,492, or £3 15s. per head; whilst in the metropolis the rate was slightly higher in 1887, though last year's expenditure was the highest in amount ever reached.

It should also be noted, in justice to the metropolitan side of the comparison in the matter of local expenditure, that the water supply, sewerage works, and tramways are included under the category of local works.

So long as this document is only used to set the people of the country districts right in the matter of alleged grievances against the city its revelations are full of interest. That the Premier does not mean to use it as an excuse for delaying legislation for local government or "decentralisation" is partly guaranteed by the introduction of his large-promised bill. The expenditure on public works has not been, it appears, so unevenly distributed as many people imagined; but it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that this is the result rather of good luck than of good guiding. The system of distribution, if system it can be called, has been full of haphazard. Each appropriation has depended very directly on the previous question as to what Government happened to be in power, what side of the House the member asking it sat upon, and how far he could reckon on the votes of fellow-members who might require his vote in return. But the changes of Government have been so frequent, and members too have been so accommodating in their political views, that every electorate has been sure of getting its day of favour, so that, given a fairly long period—and 27 years is surely long enough—and even the most haphazard of log rolling, road and bridge administration will result in something like an equitable partition of the spoils. But for all that, and this interesting document added, the sooner a local government or decentralising Act establishes a more rational system, the better it will be for city and country alike.

THE ARTILLERY BAND IN THE GARDENS.

BY VAUBIEN.

In the immediate neighbourhood of a great New South Wales city of almost a third of a million of people—artfulness alone prevents my naming it—there are public gardens fit for the metropolis of an empire. Man has done a good deal to beautify them; nature over so much more. This odd game can be very stingy and even cruel at times. She does not hesitate to keep some lands well supplied with bleak winds and leaden skies almost all the year round. On others she bestows a merciless sun and wide hot, inhospitable wastes. But like many capricious ladies, she can be generous occasionally. In an unusually generous mood most she have been when dowering the gardens referred to. All that glad sunshine, dancing waters, and pleasant winds—all that cloud and hill, variegated aspect and broken skyline, could do to make men forget, if only for a few hours, the curse dooming them to earn their bread by sweat was done with no niggard hand. In the city whose name has been so cunningly concealed there is a military band of 22 performers, and once a week these artists assemble in smart uniforms to assist meditation with melody—to afford citizens and strangers alike an opportunity for forgetting their work or their wanderings in listening to the tuneful songs without words that gifted men at the other side of the world transferred to paper by means of dots and lines, jocund semi-quaver and grave, dignified semi-breve. In old lands over the sea, these soldiers are as common as kangaroos in this Australia of ours, whenever a marching regiment halts for a day's rest, and the white or blue coated bandsmen assemble in market-square or park to give the citizens a treat, young and old, gentle and simple, grey-haired men and women, as well as toddling infants, crowd to listen. Not to go beyond the United Kingdom, the news that the band of the artillery, of the marines, of a corps of Guards, or even of a line regiment on the move, is told off for an afternoon performance, circum populo, brings a large portion of the population out of doors. But, in our Australian city of three hundred and odd thousand, in the lovely gardens where sun and shade, and sea breeze, and velvet lawn invite dalliance, a few hundred people are all that Bullini's Italian warblings, or the fine harmonies of Meyerbeer, can bring together. Can it be true that the charge, so frequently laid at our doors by visitors, of being too engrossed in the race for wealth to turn aside in pursuit of any less something in it after all? Or is that the terrible word "fashion" has secured such a hold on Australian human nature as to prevent people from attending "musical" assemblages? The latter can scarcely be the case, for it is only necessary to join the crowd on the Richmond Cricket Ground, or on the Parramatta's banks, when a great event is coming off, to view the stand from the lawn on Melbourne Cup Day, or visit the Randwick races, in order to see all sorts and conditions of men and women rubbing shoulders together in the pleasant pursuit of something, what goes by the name of it. Still the fact remains—the fact that within hawshot of a great city, with gardens whose verdure-clad knolls and perfumed flowerbeds have already board and responded to the voice of Spring, only a few hundred grown people, and, perhaps, half as many babies in arms, are all that congregate to hear the first—some say the sole—military band in the colony perform movements which have brought their composers fortune and fame. It is bewildering.

Having got the preceding paragraph off my mind, it is time to speak of Wednesday afternoon's music in the Sydney Botanic Gardens. The band is that of the New South Wales Permanent Artillery. Many, if not all, of the performers have been bandsmen in British regiments. The conductor has two or three ribbons on his uniform coat, showing that in times gone by he served where it was occasionally necessary to put down the bassoon and take up the bugle. The latter also is a musical instrument, but its melody is not a pleasant one. To play it properly requires not so much a fine touch as a determined chove. It has the droll peculiarity, too, of possessing a profound silence while turned, and inexpressive language are all around. In band contests with the bayonet, a stout pair of legs are often more serviceable than the highest skill. Men frequently take to this instrument with a light heart, but on being requested to join in an open-air concert, excuse themselves with the stupid plea that they left their music at home and wished to return for it. I myself, tried it once; but the first real performance satisfied me that the concertina possessed many advantages over it. Full well I remember the day. My opponent was a big Maori, who thrumped on a G.H. tomahawk. Enough of these remembrances. I said it then, and do not hesitate to say it now that a couple of trustworthy legs and a sound wind have preserved many an honest lad from harm. The musicians stood in the customary circle, the master in the centre. The audience formed a concentric circle with, of course, a much larger diameter. Some stood and listened, others circled and had a jaunt, while many lay prone on the soft grass drinking in with greedy eyes and the bright surroundings and the stately melodies. If the world has any greater pleasure to offer than that of indolently reclining on a lawn like a Brussels carpet, with a supply panorama of land, water, and ever-shifting cloud spread before you, the sensuous air of the South Pacific in your face, and the sonorous airs of Italy in your ears, the world has so far managed to conceal it. By far the best number on the programme was a fine and finely-given selection from Bellini's—that wrackest of singers—"I Puritani." Whence did such a tune derive their divine gift, I know not, unless the mother that delighted on the cradle and tuned the soul of the wee babbling thing—hawking for something more nutritious than its tiny fist—in concert pitch, time enabling it to lisp in the language of the angels. Ekem! Conductor, performer, and listener, dry land and sea will have disappeared in the infinite azure of the past when the throne is Tyndall's before the answer is given. If we could tell how Rossini, Mozart, and Beethoven came by their strains, there would not be far to look for the cause of Shakespeare's wild woodnotes, or Belanger's dainty lyrics. One thing is pretty certain, the goddess or the fay who touch with fire the lips of earth's gifted ones has, so far, looked askance at this poor southern hemisphere. On more than one occasion it seemed as if she had come among us, came to stay. But, whenever it was through pique at our prosaic antipodean life, or inability to discover proper recipients for her bounty, she seems to have spread her wings again and returned to her northern home.

Come to think of it, this music is a droll thing. None of the old-world peoples—Egyptian, Greek, or Roman—had the faintest idea of it as we understand it. The nearest approach to modern orchestra were be hidden from them as that hemisphere of the moon on which no man has gazed. In spite of Socratic inquiring mind, it is by no means impossible that on hearing for the first time a Salvation Army Band he would take to his heels. This, however, is scarcely a fair test as we moderns, with all our experience, are frequently prompted to do the same. The world's idea to the Colosseum, the Hippodrome, and the European eye all tangible objects present much the same appearance whether the eye is in the head of an infant or of an old man. Not so the ear. Rear 20 English infants in China, and 20 Chinese in England. At maturity the Englishman will think a tom-tom divine and the Chinaman a nuisance. With the Mongolians it will be precisely the reverse. In our Sepoy regiments the Indian bandsman tries to "beat" white brothers who have never left their native villages prefer the scream of a locomotive. In New Zealand the Maoris used to crowd round and sit for hours listening to the drums and fifes, but would pick up their blankets and run when the brass band began. This opens up a whole field of curious speculations, but to return to the gardens.

Few of the listeners belong to "society." It is not what you would call a select audience—not the sort of people one would expect to meet at the Admiral's garden party or in the front seat at a University commemoration. There are no exquisite toilettes, and few of the gentlemen wear gloves. There is a fair sprinkling of young women in charge of babies. The latter, if not asleep in perambulators, are busily employed behind trees in that most fascinating of all infantile pursuits—making themselves pitiable objects by means of mud, soft-clay, and the thousand-and-one odds and ends so dear to children, who think all callings vulgar compared with that of the chimney-sweep. Why it is that this particular profession should throw such a glamour over immature minds is a puzzle. Give a sturdy laddie or lassie of three a piece of chalk, or a handful of flour, and the thought of applying it to the face or pinafore never seems to suggest itself. But place either before a small paddle, or face to face with a shovelful of soft-cooee, then come back in five minutes and observe what your child is like. Mankind must have been originally black, or young people would never take so instinctively to mud. The unhappiest-looking being to be seen at the band on Wednesday was an urchin of four, who, with glossy boots, glossy curls, and neat gloves, approached in charge of a maid. This was at 4 p.m. The happiest, sprightliest, most contented person that tripped from the Gardens that day was a boy of four, who left at 4.30 p.m. with his wee pantaloons disgracefully unpresentable, and a thick crust of miscellaneous refuse artistically salad on him from parapet to basement. Child-life is often dreary for all it seems to pleasant. But the youth who, on being insinuated for the first time into a new suit of velvet, with cap, gloves, and stockings to match, and sent in charge of a domestic to listen to the band of the Permanent Artillery, has frequently within his reach, especially if the previous night was wet, opportunities for placid enjoyment that a mocarch might envy.

A wall about 6ft. high from the land side runs all round the gardens, presenting its concave side seawards. On this a number of gentlemen, app-rently from the Circular Quay wharfs and their neighbourhood, were seated in attitudes suggestive of comfort rather than effect. Few had collars, many Crimson shirts; pipes, all. They faced the band, were about 50 yards away, and kept up an unflinching fire of well-chosen raillery, subtle irony, and observations on things in general. Superline writers might be disposed to refer to these lads and young men as "larrikins" or "roughs," but they were nothing of the kind. Their bailiage might not pass muster in the drawing-room or the boudoir, but whatever mild horse-play they indulged in was kept strictly to themselves. In truth, the real rough—the gentleman you see at Blackwall or meet at the Newt Cut—is seldom or never seen in Australia. I say this witingly, and I claim to have had a fair opportunity for judging. It makes one smile sometimes to take up an Australian newspaper in which a petty street row is described, and think of what can be seen any night of the week in London, Glasgow, Liverpool, Manchester, Dublin, and half a dozen other large towns in the United Kingdom. The worst display of colonial blackguardism I ever saw was at Gollingwood, Melbourne, and it was a zephyr compared with a cyclone when placed beside an ordinary Saturday night's diversion in some Liverpool street. The roughest-looking customers you see at the band are not only not fit to wait at table behind the British artisan's chair, but are well bred in comparison with the specimens to be met at colonial races or rowing matches. As a rule, the true rowdy does not care for good music. He would sooner witness a dog fight or a glove contest than listen to Dan Godfrey's men. I mention these facts because many people forge a real fear owing to the purely gratuitous assumption that the rough element will be present in force.

Among the crowd are many Victorian bookmakers, who came up for last week's races. What odd experiences these men must have—always dealing with the sensy side of life. The leviathans among them are dressed in a quiet way. It is the smaller fry who revel in loud colours, massive chains, and scintillating studs. The big men put up at the best hotels, and drive natty dogcarts drawn by blood stock. The others frequent second-class houses, and often appear at the races in the brave livery of a circus clown. Next to being a bookmaker I know of nothing more awful than being subjected to nameless indignities through being mistaken for a "swiper." Owing to an unnatural resemblance to a sporting Israelite, there was a friend of mine who could not attend a horse race or a sailing match without coming home in tatters. The poor fellow, having kicked in the vicinity of the course, would be surrounded by people who, if they knew him with vegetables and ribaldry. All this time the roundabout whose lessee he knew was 10 miles off drinking hurriedly and counting his Hogarth guineas. At 6, my friend would knock timidly at his back door, with a face chance of being mangled by the savage dog. So you know why I despise bookmakers. Stay, is that the correct Anthem to which the bar owners render a beating time with such vigour and enthusiasm? Bless me! how quickly an hour and a half pass, as you listen to the Band of the New South Wales Permanent Artillery in the Botanic Gardens.

RUSSIAN SCHOOLS.

The Times published the following telegram from its St. Petersburg correspondent respecting the attitude of the Russian authorities in regard to public education:—

A curious change appears to be coming over the views of the Russian authorities in the matter of public education. The former mania for spreading classical education among all classes now seems to be giving way to a desire to restrict it as much as possible. This was already noticeable before M. Raskoff, the great champion of classicism, passed away. Judging by experience of this century this it does not diminish. Nihilism and increase the alienation of the rising generation for the autocratic power. The Ministry of Public Education is now going to do all it can to stay the influx of students of the poorer classes into the Universities. The way in which this is to be done is made clear by a circular just issued by the Minister to the curators of all scholastic circuits. The medical is, of course, the usual arbitrary one, and it may be confidently predicted that a very strong feeling of dissatisfaction will be caused by it among the classes to be henceforth excluded from the higher schools.

The circular in question and others lately issued show that the classical gymnasia are to be diminished in number in proportion as the objectionable classes are excluded therefrom. Of the course to be pursued the following paragraph from the latest circular will give a very good idea: "The Minister says—"Being concerned for the improvement of the status of students in the gymnasia and pro-gymnasia schools, I find it necessary to restrict admission into these establishments to those children who are under the care of parents offering sufficient guarantee that such children will be subject to a regular course of supervision at home, and will be able to dispose of the requisite means for completing their studies. Therefore, strictly observing this principle, the gymnasia and progymnasia will henceforth refuse to receive or to expel the children of domestic servants, of cooks, washerwomen, small shopkeepers, and others of the like condition, whose children, with the exception, perhaps, of those gifted with extraordinary capacities, should not be raised from the circle to which they belong, and be thereby led, as living experience has shown, to despise their parents, to become discontented with their lot, and irritated against the inevitable inequalities of existing social position."

In order to carry out this view, the directors of all gymnasia,

OUR LONDON LETTER.

LONDON, Aug. 26.

The Bulgarian question is once more engaging the anxious attention of those who are concerned in the course of European politics. Prince Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg has made a tolerably satisfactory entry into, and progress through, his new dominions, but, now that the enthusiasm evoked by his appearance is beginning to die away, he is finding out how uneasy lies the head that wears a crown. The Powers are all agreed in saying that his action is illegal, that is to the extent of his having accepted the rulership of Bulgaria without endorsement by the Porte and the Powers. His nomination by the Grand Sobranje, however, is admitted to be perfectly within the four corners of the Berlin Treaty. Russia, of course, remains the greatest obstacle in the way of his peaceably and quietly settling down to govern the country. At one time it was believed that he might have come to an understanding with the Czar, who is known to be personally friendly to him, by virtue of which he would promise to direct the affairs of Bulgaria so that that principality might be regarded, if not as an appanage of the Muscovite Empire, at least as almost entirely under Russian influence. Prince Ferdinand made strenuous efforts to arrive at some such agreement with the Czar, but without success, and the notion that there is any understanding between the Prince and the Emperor must now be dispelled, for not only the Russian press, but also the Russian diplomatists, are doing all they can to make circumstances exceedingly uncomfortable for the "Coburger."

The latest move on the part of the St. Petersburg Court is to put pressure on the Porte, as suzerain of Bulgaria, in order to compel Prince Ferdinand's withdrawal, or lead to his ejectment by Turkish forces, backed up by Russia. But Turkey does not seem disposed to pull the chestnuts out of the fire for her northern rival. It is said, however, that the Sultan has addressed an unofficial letter to Prince Ferdinand, advising him to quit Bulgaria; and it is certain that he is not so much in accord with England, Austria, and Italy as many Englishmen would doubtless like. For reasons of his own, Prince Bismarck appears to be putting German influence on the side of Russia in this Bulgarian business, though it is surmised that the agreement between Russia and Germany is more apparent than genuine. But, after all, the real point at issue in the Bulgarian business is whether Prince Ferdinand has pluck and self-reliance sufficient to remain where he is and defy the consequences; and whether, should he do so, the Sultan and Russia would venture to interfere in Bulgaria by force of arms. The latter contingency may be dismissed as very remote, for Austria could not afford to allow either Turkey or Russia to interfere militarily in Bulgaria. But it is quite possible that Prince Ferdinand may be so worried by outside pressure, as well as by the dissensions amongst his own leaders—who, having invited him into the country, do not seem disposed to help him by forming a Government to carry on the work of administration—that, like Prince Alexander, he may come to the conclusion that the prestige of being Prince of Bulgaria is not worth the trouble which it entails. Certain it is that during the last few days the outlook before the Prince is not so favourable as it was a week ago.

The discussion which took place in the House of Commons on Tuesday night upon the New Hebrides question did not add much to our knowledge of the subject, for beyond the statement that negotiations were proceeding between ourselves and the French Government in relation thereto, and that the English Foreign Office had declined to recognise any connection between the New Hebrides question and the neutralisation of the Suez Canal, Sir James Fergusson, the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, had little to tell us. The most satisfactory feature about the debate, and the comments in the press to which it has given rise, is the sympathy displayed towards the feelings of the Australian colonies in this matter, and the general disposition to scout any idea of compromise such as that suggested by Mr. John Higginson, the Republique Française, and other French journals. Nevertheless, it is not easy to see how the difficulty is to be settled, save on the basis of compromise, for the French appear to be determined, treaty engagements or no treaty engagements, to stay where they are, and even the most perfervid Victorians would hardly pretend that the New Hebrides question is one of sufficient gravity to go to war about. Victorians in London are indulging in a good deal of what Anthony Trollope used to call colonial "blow" upon this subject, and are warning us that, if any understanding be arrived at such as is not acceptable to Australian amour propre, the severance of the colonies from the mother-country may be the result. The fact of these vapourings being uttered, together with the general impasse which the New Hebrides question seems to have reached, intensifies, in quarters in which this matter is closely watched and earnestly discussed, the regret which has constantly been felt that the Rosebery-Waddington agreement came to nought. It has always been understood that New South Wales was willing to sanction the compromise which was then proposed, and which, if carried out, would have satisfactorily settled the New Hebrides question eighteen months ago; but Victoria managed to get the agreement set aside. Since then the New Hebrides question has gone from bad to worse. The language of the Republique Française would seem to indicate that a compromise on the Rosebery-Waddington basis is not, even now, absolutely out of the question. Should such prove to be the case, the opinion of those in London who are most familiar with Australian politics is that it might reasonably be entertained.

A telegram in to-day's newspapers from Rome has caused some little excitement in Anglo-Australian circles. It is stated that the Pope has recently publicly declared, on the authority of Cardinal Moran, Archbishop of Sydney, that the New South Wales Government had offered land to the extent of 300,000 acres to any missionaries who would undertake the civilisation of the natives in the colony. His Holiness thereupon requested the Propaganda to make arrangements for closing with this offer, lest the Roman Catholic Church should be forestalled by the Protestants. Nothing has been heard on this side of any such offer having been made by your Government, and hence the news conveyed in the telegram from Rome is accepted with some reserve. Nevertheless good Protestants are inclined to feel a little disturbed at the prospect of an enterprise which threatens to go a long way towards Catholicising the parent Australian colony.

The Proclamation of the National League has been taken very quietly, both here and in Ireland. Of course it cannot be allowed to pass without formal protest. On Tuesday a meeting of Irish Nationalists, who were assisted by some half-dozen insignificant English Radical members of Parliament, was held in Dublin to denounce the action of the Government, and last night Mr. Gladstone, in his place in Parliament, moved an address to the Crown to disallow the proclamation. But the proceedings in neither instance showed signs of much vitality. At the Dublin meeting Mr. W. O'Brien and Mr. Dillon indulged in a good deal of lawless talk, and for this, together with some other wild speeches he has been making, Mr. O'Brien is to be proceeded against under the provisions of the Crimes Act. The debate in Parliament, so far as it has gone, has proved little short of a farce. Mr. Gladstone charged the Government with having proclaimed the National League as a "dangerous association," without having presented to Parliament the information upon which it based its action. But Mr. Balfour, the Irish Secretary, and the Solicitor-General for Scotland answered this complaint with crushing effect. It is understood that the division will be taken to-night, when, of course, the Government will have a majority.

One of the immediate effects of the proclamation of the National League was that a certain number of Gladstonian Radicals immediately joined the ranks of that association, and it is announced that, as soon as Parliament has risen, they are going to assist the regular Parnellites in rousing Ireland against the Executive. They are apparently under the impression that Dublin Castle will not venture to take proceedings against them for inciting the people to outrage as it would do against ordinary Irish Nationalists; but in this particular they are likely to find themselves mistaken.

Another of Mr. Pasteur's patients is likely to die. At the beginning of the year Lord Deveraile, an Irish peer, was, together with his coachman, bitten by a tame fox, which was kept about the stables as a pet. Shortly afterwards the animal developed signs of rabies. Lord Doveraile and the coachman at once set out for Paris, and were placed under treatment by Dr. Pasteur. Since then Lord Doveraile enjoyed excellent health until a day or two ago, when he complained of feeling unwell. A doctor was summoned, who at once pronounced symptoms of hydrophobia to be apparent. His Lordship rapidly became worse, and the latest accounts concerning him are that his life is despaired of.

Mrs. Langworthy has achieved her final triumph, and the long litigation which has made her name famous wherever the English language is spoken has come to a close. Mr. E. M. Langworthy came over to England for the purpose of getting an annulment of the decree of bankruptcy which had been made against him. He was forced to appear in open court and publicly purge himself of his contempt, and then he had to make a pecuniary settlement with Mrs. Langworthy. With characteristic meanness he struggled to the last to obtain some minor advantage. First of all he wanted to deduct £50 for interest on the £20,000 which he had arranged, in pursuance of the decree of the Court, to pay her before the 12th September. Next he tried to haggle about the payment of the annuity of £500 a-year to the child of his marriage with Mrs. Langworthy, endeavouring to arrange that the payment should cease when the child reached the age of 16 years, instead of being continued for life; and lastly, he sought to prevent Mrs. Langworthy retaining the use of her married name. In all these points, however, he was defeated, and, after a hard struggle, the full amount of the £20,000 was handed over to Mrs. Langworthy's solicitors in the shape of 20 £1000 Bank of England notes, together with £1500 for costs; old Mrs. Langworthy signed a bond for the payment of the annuity in monthly instalments to Mrs. Langworthy's child; Mr. Langworthy made a humble apology in writing to Mrs. Langworthy's sister, Miss Edith Long, and then, and not until then, was the decree of bankruptcy annulled. Mr. Langworthy has now left England for the Argentine Republic, and Mrs. Langworthy is recruiting her health in Switzerland. For this truly orthodox termination—of vice defeated and virtue triumphant—to one of the strangest romances of modern times, honour is due to the public-spirited editor of the Pall Mall Gazette.

Our wheat harvest is being rapidly garnered in the south and midlands; but so far the crop has not proved a satisfactory one. Indeed it promises to be very much lighter than usual throughout the entire country. The reason for this is that the summer was late, owing to the long, cold, wet spring, and when it did come it burst upon us with almost tropical heat. The result has been that the straw of the corn is very short, and the grain not well matured. Except for a terrible thunderstorm which raged over the country last week, England has virtually been without rain for three months. Consequently it is only on good rich lands that the crops are equal to, or in some few cases, superior to the average. The Hessian fly is making very sad ravages in the midlands, and even in Yorkshire. The worst feature about this pest is that we are only just at the commencement of its destructive career, and during the next year or two we may witness a most serious increase in its mischief.

OUR PARIS LETTER.

PARIS, Aug. 25.

The Voltaire has published an article on the New Hebrides question. Inasmuch as it very accurately represents French views which prevail on the subject, I will translate it in its entirety. It will be observed that the compliments which it passes upon English missionaries are not of a conciliatory tendency. What the Voltaire, however, says with regard to them is merely a repetition of what has been stated scores of times in other French papers. The English missionary was cordially detested in France long before the "Shaw" incident occurred, but that little affair, together with the well-known and effective opposition of other English missionaries to the establishment of French influence in Madagascar, served to deepen the antipathy, which arises from political rather than religious causes. The following is the article:—

"If it were possible to suppress the perfidious and perturbing race of Anglican missionaries, whited sepulchres who make the Gospel an instrument of their hatreds and their appetites, I have an idea that it would not be difficult to establish a sincere peace between France and England. We have the admission of this from a certain reverend, G. J. Paton by name, an atrabilious and turgid Protestant, who, in a letter read at the Federal Convention held at Sydney frankly declared that his work in the New Hebrides for the last 20 years has been that of inculcating upon the native mind the hatred of the French and of Catholics. I do not believe that the evangelical zeal of this Anglican has done much for English influence in the New Hebrides and their establishment upon a territory which justice and the probity of history attribute to France. It seems, moreover, improbable that the reverend will ever have the satisfaction of causing a quarrel on this subject between England and France. Our honourable compatriot, M. John Higginson, who has done so much for French colonisation, has just addressed to Sir Charles Dilke a most interesting letter in reply to certain assertions made in the book entitled 'Europe in 1887,' and which treats of your difference with England as regards the possession of the New Hebrides. Sir Charles Dilke—this is not astonishing—claims for England the possession of the New Hebrides, which he wishes to see annexed to Australia, although they are 400 leagues distant from that country. Why? His reason cannot be based on the right of the first occupant. Our Bougainville had visited the New Hebrides six years before Cook. Moreover, England has more than once proved the fragility of this right of the first occupant. If it held good, how is it that New Holland, discovered and occupied by the Dutch, belongs to England? Nor can the reason be based on treaty-right. The possession of the New Hebrides has never been the subject of a solemn treaty. It is true that in 1878 France and England signed a sort of convention in a private manner according to the terms of which there was an undertaking on both sides not to interfere with the independence of the New Hebrides. Well, and what does that matter? Who would venture to maintain at the Foreign Office that this convention, signed with very little reflection on our side, bound us in the same manner as a treaty would that had been solemnly entered into? France signed this convention in 1878. She can renounce it in 1887. It will not be England that will prevent her from doing so. Has not the convention already been torn up by England, who showed her contempt for its provisions by seizing the Fiji Islands, and thus upsetting, to her own advantage, the equilibrium which the object of the convention was to establish? Sir Charles Dilke has an economic axiom upon which he bases his reasoning. He says the right to dominate depends upon the superiority of interests. Let it be so. M. John Higginson declares that if up to the year 1882 English interests predominated in the New Hebrides, circumstances have entirely changed since that date. The French of Noumea have purchased 300,000 hectares of land of English owners, and 400,000 of the natives. They have cultivated the soil, set up commercial establishments, organised a postal system, and landed a body of troops and Catholic missionaries. The result of all this is that the English have disappeared, and French interests predominate in the New Hebrides. The right to dominate depends upon the superiority of interests. The axiom fits our case. But of what use is all this discussion? Since 1853, the date of our establishment in New Caledonia, the New Hebrides, that are less than 100 leagues distant from it, have been French soil. They have always been considered a natural and necessary dependency—the indispensable continuation of our colony. Is England prepared to drive us from them, and to deny the commonsense consequence of an accomplished fact? On this point we are certainly not going to war with our neighbours, and the Rev. J. G. Paton will have nothing for his 20 years' hatred of the French name. Let us negotiate in peace. M. John Higginson desires neither a condominion, which would be worth no more in the New Hebrides than it was in Egypt, nor a division of the islands, which is impossible and ridiculous. He wishes for France to have the full and complete possession of the New Hebrides. For the sake of peace, he proposes the abrogation of the Convention of 1878, and the recognition by France of an English Protectorate over the Banks and the Santa Cruz. Moreover, it is proposed that the Government of the Republic shall undertake, in order to calm the susceptibilities of Australia, not to use the New Hebrides for the purpose of penal relegation. The people of Sydney were alarmed at the prospect of being in the neighbourhood of our convicts, although at a distance of 400 leagues. These propositions are equitable. It would be incomprehensible if our Government took exception to any one of them, or deferred the discussion with the Foreign Office."

Although the Russian official press has lately been throwing cold water upon the French Radicals who have been talking ostentatiously of the sympathetic ties which now unite France and Russia, the relations of the two nations are becoming more and more cordial. No alliance has been formed between them, but a community of ideas on political questions affecting the distribution of power, and the growing conviction that each can afford substantial assistance to the other, are preparing the ground for such an alliance. That the official party in Russia should show great reserve with regard to the movement that has become so sharply defined in France is quite comprehensible. Whatever views the Czar may hold respecting the necessity of a great war to deliver Russia from the galling pressure of the Germanic nations, it is certain that he has no wish to precipitate the event. For some time past the Russian policy has been one of waiting and watching, and at the present moment it is more than ever one of absolute caution and discretion. The Franco-Russian alliance is not likely to take place until the necessity for it arises. All signs, however, go to show that in the next European war France and Russia will act in concert. This is a political evolution of tremendous importance. It completely changes the axis of the European situation. The history of Europe shows that since the days of Peter the Great and Louis XIV. almost down to our own time France and Russia have been antagonists. Peter I. made overtures of an alliance to France, but although Louis XIV. perceived its political advantages he could not abandon his allies, the Swedes, the Poles, and the Turks, of whom Russia was the natural enemy. Could Russia have allied herself to France she would not have formed that alliance in 1726 with Austria and Prussia, which continued with a few short breaks until 1886. As Russia grew stronger by her conquests of Swedish, Polish, and Turkish territory, she was regarded with growing dislike and suspicion by the French. Then came the Reign of Terror. The coalition formed against the revolutionary French was in the first instance headed by Russia, and the memorable expedition of Napoleon, in 1812, was a consequence of this interference on the part of the Russians with the internal affairs of France. It is worthy of note that when Napoleon started for Moscow with his grand army, both Austria and Prussia offered to assist him against their ally of yesterday. During the whole of Louis Philippe's reign, France and Russia sulked with one another. This bad feeling reached its climax when Napoleon III. joined England in making war upon Russia in the Crimea. The French now say that they were dragged into this war by Louis Napoleon, who paid with the blood of France England's price for treating him as a sovereign, and giving him a status among the royal families of Europe. As a matter of fact, the war was popular. In 1870 Russia took her revenge upon the French by allowing them to be crushed by Germany, and, animated by the same spirit of reprisals, the French Government associated itself at the Berlin Conference with other Powers in snatching from Russia the fruit of her victories on the Danube and in the Balkans. But nations change their minds as quickly—perhaps more quickly—than individuals. No French Government would now move a step to prevent Russia from seizing Constantinople or swallowing the whole of Turkey if she felt equal to the effort. France has discovered within the last few months that her policy with regard to Russia, extending over nearly 200 years, has been nothing but a series of prodigious blunders; that this nation so long treated as a traditional enemy is in reality, by its geographical position and the identity of certain political interests of the first importance, a natural ally. This firm determination of the French to support the Russians in all their schemes is unquestionably a disturbing element. England has not the same reason as Germany for regarding this Russo-French movement with anxiety; nevertheless she cannot afford to be indifferent to it. An alliance between France and Russia considerably increases the danger to which British possessions in Asia are exposed.

OUR ST. PETERSBURG LETTER.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 30.

M. Katkoff, who has always been one of the strongest adversaries of the Russian Universities, which he thirsted to reform after his own ideal, never went, even in imagination, so far as the Government is now going in repressive measures, the purpose of which it is even difficult to understand, so opposed are they to every practical end. Justly alarmed at the indignation the rumours of forthcoming changes have awakened among the intelligent Moscovites, M. Katkoff hurried to St. Petersburg, and besought the Emperor not to sanction the project in question; but his Majesty, who in his present designs is only following the advice bestowed upon him by the triumvirate (Katkoff, Pobedonosteff, and Tolstoi) for years, justly displeased at what he rightly considers inconsistency on the part of Katkoff, treated him with so much severity that the great publicist returned to Moscow in a state of discomfiture and humiliation that brought on a fit of paralysis and placed his life in jeopardy. During more than a week his case seemed to be hopeless; having lost his speech, but fully preserving the clearness of his intelligence, he fell into a state of restlessness and anxiety, which increased the peril. The Moscow Gazette continues to come out, only shorn of its brilliant leading articles, which are always due to the pen of M. Katkoff himself. This star has been on the decline for some time already. Had he been suffered to retain until now that strong ascendancy which he once had over the Emperor, there is no doubt that Russia would have plunged headlong into war, for Katkoff preferred an open struggle to the silent German campaign against the Russian finances, in which all Europe stealthily helps. The gradual dwindling of the rouble to half of its value is the result of clever intrigues on the part of the "Berlin friends," and a great many persons, by no means followers of Katkoff, begin to think that in this respect at least he may have been in the right, and that this apathetic and too prolonged "expectative attitude" of the Government concerning Bulgarian affairs, may end in a more unfavourable way than if a great war had actually taken place. This opinion is beginning to gain ground even among the most peacefully disposed persons.

The candidature of Prince Saxe Cobourg to the throne of Bulgaria is regarded in Petersburg as another act of the comedy played by the Regency. It is unlikely the Prince should accept the proposition without the sanction of Russia, which he hopes to obtain. Radoslavoff is arrested in Varna, which fact proves that Stambouloff's party and that of the Radical ex-Minister are at war. Just now the Regency, i.e., Messrs. Stambouloff and Motkouroff, compose the Austrian party, still hoping to assure the triumph of their candidate, Prince Saxe Cobourg, whereas Nicolaeff and Radoslavoff, remaining faithful to Prince Battenberg, whom they still hope to behold on the throne of Bulgaria, represent the English party. Austria and England, who went hand in hand as long as it was necessary to frustrate the plans of Russia, disagreed in the practical part of their programme, and now are at a loss what to do. The latest diplomatical project of Russia concerning a compromise for putting an end to the anarchy in Bulgaria, has evidently been if not accepted, at least taken into consideration by Germany. The consent of France not being doubtful, it remains only for England not to withdraw here. The project in question can, however, only be realised by serious concessions to Russia, the dissolution of the National Assembly, the fixing of new elections under proper control, and last, but not least, the choice of a Prince not antagonistic to Russian interests on the Peninsula. The realisation of this plan is not easier now than it was at the beginning, for the Regency would have to retire willingly from the political arena, or be deposed by the nation. It is difficult to foresee how this end will be effected. If M.M. Stambouloff and Motkouroff continue to display such resources of subtlety in intrigue, and boldness in action, as that with which they have braved the Colossus all this time, and set Russian diplomacy at fault, there is no reason why they should give up now. We must seek the cause of Russia's reiteration of her former pretensions in some arrangement with England. A new candidate is already named here—no other than Prince Tmeretinski. The papers here add a good deal of importance to this new phase of the Bulgarian question.

Affairs in Afghanistan appear to be marching towards a favourable termination. The tone of the English press has changed in a marked degree, and many organs, without any intermediary phases, have passed from open ill-will and antagonism to Russia to the expression of almost friendly feelings. A letter from Petersburg to the Political Correspondent, received, it is assured, from a reliable source, asserts that in diplomatic circles here the arrangement arrived at about the Afghan frontier line is considered as having a "symptomatic importance," and as extending far beyond the simple fact. This supposition is founded upon the settled question having been one of the most thorny, and even several times on the point of provoking a serious rupture in Central Asia between England and Russia. That Russia has forborne to make further difficulties only proves once more how earnestly she strives for peace; for there is not the smallest doubt that in those regions a war would be certain to end in favour of the Russians, and they might have taken this advantage to strike such a blow at England as fully to compensate their disasters in Bulgaria. Consequently, the frank manner in which Russia has held out her hand to England, and fully reassured her on some points, proves that the unbridled chauvinism and thirst for conquest supposed to be the leading features of Russian politics are clearly an aberration much spread in England and greatly owing to the Moscow Gazette. Just now the whole attention of the Government is concentrated upon the Hydra of Anarchism. How to crush this, how to preserve the rising generation from being imbued with its doctrines, how to prevent the evil from spreading among the unenlightened mass—these are the problems which engross the attention of all, from the Emperor down to the last of his functionaries. And like a set of unskilful physicians they apply the most unlikely remedies to cure this sore place, and instead of curing it irritate the whole organism. When the best minds of a nation have come to the conclusion—as Count Tolstoy for example—that in culture and education lies the secret of the evil of revolution, and that a nation to be kept quiet should be kept ignorant, what can one expect?

Just at present every thing seems quiet enough. I do not believe that the plans for the reforming of the Universities in their actual redaction will be applied. It is not likely that the Emperor will risk making himself so unpopular among those of his subjects who are most devoted to him. Every one expects September with an anxious heart, however, and the clouds brooding over society render every one more or less crestfallen. Whereas in every other civilised and great sacrifices are made by the Government to make education cheap, here measures are taken to put it absolutely out of the reach of poor people, and to so circumscribe the attainment of it with difficulties for those who can pay, as to discourage the most sanguine persons, and dissuade them from the pursuit of knowledge to be had at such a price.

The great topic of the day here is the eclipse of the sun, which is to take place on the 7th August. The number of Englishmen and Americans who have arrived is incredible. Even now, a fortnight before the time, the Moscow hotels are fast filling. The line of the total eclipse extending over a great portion of Russia and Siberia, where the population is absolutely ignorant and in a most primitive state, it has been thought necessary to charge the clergy of every village to explain the cause of the sudden darkness to the peasants; for the last time this phenomenon occurred the panic among the people was such that many killed themselves, and still more were bereft of their reason. It is a question whether any good will come of this precaution, because the priests, for the most part, are quite as superstitious as their flocks. The common people have not the least faith in what is taught them concerning certain natural phenonema. Not one Russian peasant believes that the sun does not turn round the earth; if you tell him so he laughs indulgently, and says, "Well, if master will have it so, let it be so;" but he has not the least doubt that he is in the right, and that "too much learning makes a man crazy."

A most curious correspondence is taking place between the authorities of the city of Vierna, recently destroyed by an earthquake, and the St. Petersburg authorities. The question is whether this city is to be rebuilt on the old site, or transported 70 versts east, on a spot said to be less exposed in case of a repetition of the earthquake. A commission of scientific men was appointed to inquire into the question, and it unanimously declared the old site to be perilous, all the probabilities being in favour of frequent future shocks. But the Vierna authorities, having an interest to stay where they are, have sent a petition to St. Petersburg to ask permission to rebuild the town of wood, upon the same place, wooden houses having proved less dangerous than solid stone buildings. Almost all the remaining inhabitants of the doomed town have appended their names to this strange petition. After some hesitation the authority has been granted.

On July 16 a sensible shock was felt at Baku and throughout all the Caucasus. No lives were lost, nor were any buildings seriously damaged; but the panic among the inhabitants was very great. Travellers by the Tiflis railway clearly felt the shock, though at first no one guessed the real cause.

The building of the Russian railroads in Central Asia has led to the appreciation of the excellent lands through which they will run, and to calculations upon the fabulous results which a proper culture of these regions would bring to Russia. It is affirmed by persons familiar with these parts of Central Asia that Russia could, with a little care and cultivation, not only get the whole amount of cotton necessary for her factories from thence, but export double the quantity and more. The extent of territory belonging to Russia, in Central Asia, is immense, the quality of the soil better than that of Little Russia. In the Fergan and Sir Darin provinces alone there are more than 2,250,000 dissetins of irrigated land. The non-irrigated districts are, nevertheless, fertile, if there be sufficient rain, which is not infrequently the case. The climate is most favourable to the development of the silkworm. The primitive fabrication of silks by the natives has already made great progress since the conquest of the country by the Russians. Seventeen years ago silk was produced to the quantity of 100,000 pouds a-year, and was so good that it sold for 400 roubles the poud. In 1870-75, 40,000,000 roubles worth of silk was exported, principally bought by Russians. Then the resources of that rich country in cattle, in fruits, in all kinds of minerals, are immense, and await only some practical enterprise to fill the empty coffers of the State. Ignorance, however, has called the Russian possessions in Central Asia "oceans of sand scorched by a burning sun," and the public has accepted this definition.

The law forbidding Germans to acquire land in Poland is now put forward by the Post as the reason for the pitiless war declared to the Russian finances. "This measure," says the Post, "has placed the Russian credit in such a doubtful position, that it has at least the merit of opening the eyes of Europe, which might have continued to have that blind confidence which has given Russia the possibility of getting so deeply into debt with Germany."

The harvests promise to be fine in most of the governments.

The Nijni Novgorod Fair opened on the 15th. Until now business appears to be slack, though there is a great demand for cotton manufactured stuffs, prints, &c.

Baron Maclay has returned to St. Petersburg with his family.

CORONER'S INQUESTS.

A FATAL FALL.

The Acting Coroner (Captain Fisher, J.P.) held an inquest yesterday at the Assembly Hotel, Hunter-street, regarding the death of Aristo Scardilgi, 23 years of age, a native of Tuscany, who met with a fall on board the ship Seirlol Wyn on the 18th August last. The deceased was a seaman, and was recently employed in unloading the ship Seirlol Wyn while she was lying at Adelaide Wharf. Shortly after 2 p.m. on the 18th August last he endeavoured to lower himself from the rigging to the deck by means of a rope. In doing this he fell from the third mast on to the deckhouse, a depth of about 35 feet. He was at once taken to the Sydney Hospital, where it was found that his back was broken. He lingered until 11 p.m. on the 27th September, when he died from the effects of that injury. The jury found that the man died from the effects of an injury received through falling from the yard on to the deck of the ship.

FOUND DEAD IN BED.

An inquest was also held by the Acting Coroner at the South Sydney morgue, yesterday, touching the death of a woman named Sophia Smith, 55 years of age, who was found dead in bed at her residence, No. 50, Gipps-street, Surry Hills, at an early hour on Thursday morning. The deceased was the wife of William F. Smith, caretaker of the Royal Arcade. The evidence showed that when she went to bed at about 9 p.m. on Wednesday last she complained of a pain in the left shoulder. Her husband then asked her whether she would have a doctor called in, and she said that she would rather wait till the next morning. At 2 a.m. on Thursday her husband found that her body was very cold, and he consequently went for a medical man. On the arrival of Dr. Marshall, jun., he pronounced life extinct. From an autopsy of the body the doctor concluded that the primary cause of death was acute inflammation of the right lung, and that the secondary causes were heart disease and general alcoholic cirrhosis. A verdict of death from natural causes was returned by the jury.

SUDDEN changes of weather, any emergency, influenza, feverish colds, drawing an overdraft on the bank of life, late hours, jagged, unnatural excitement, breathing impure air, too rich food, alcoholic drink, gouty, rheumatic, and other blood poisons, biliousness, sick headache, skin eruptions, pimples on the face, want of appetite, sourness of stomach, &c., use Eno's Fruit Salt. It is pleasant, cooling, health-giving, refreshing, and invigorating. You cannot overstate its great value in keeping the blood pure and free from disease.

CAUTION.—Legal rights are protected in every civilised country. Examine each bottle and see that the capsule is marked "Eno's Fruit Salt;" without it you have been imposed on by worthless imitations. Sold by all chemists.

LAW REPORT.

SUPREME COURT.—FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 30.

In Equity.—(Before his Honor the CHIEF JUSTICE.)

DIXSON V. SAYWELL'S TOBACCO COMPANY.

Mr. C. J. Manning, instructed by Messrs. Creagh and Williams, appeared for the defendant company, and moved for further time to file statement of defence in the above suit, which is brought to restrain defendant company from using a certain brand or trade mark alleged by the plaintiff to be a colourable imitation of a trade mark used and registered by him. Mr. Knox appeared to show cause.

His HONOR, after hearing argument, considered that the defendant was entitled to an extension of time, and ordered that statement of defence be filed on or before 12 o'clock on the following day, to be verified by affidavit afterwards; costs of the application to abide the event.

RE ESTATE OF WILLIAM PURVES (DECEASED) AND THE SETTLED ESTATES ACT.

Mr. C. J. Manning appeared for the trustees under the will of the late William Purves, and applied under the 13th section of the Settled Estates Act for an order to sell and dispose of the property out of Court, under such restrictions as the Court might deem it fit to impose.

His HONOR granted the application.

Several short matters were adjourned till Monday.

In Chambers.—(Before his Honor Mr. Justice INNES.)

RE ROBERT HAMILTON AND OTHERS.

Mr. Wise and Mr. Cohen appeared for Robert Hamilton, John Hamilton, and George Lea Wilson, of Sydney, and applied for an order calling upon Wm. Jennings, Abraham Jennings, and others, trading under the style and firm of Jennings, Pickering, and Co., timber merchants, to show cause why a certain caveat of the 30th March, 1887, should not be removed from the file, and why the applicants should not be allowed to register under the provisions of the Real Property Act a certain memorandum of mortgage, dated 1886, under the hand of Frederick Blunt the younger, of Marrickville, builder, of a certain parcel of land situated at Addison-road, Petersham, being the whole of the land comprised in a certain certificate of title, bearing date the 1st day of July, 1886, and registered under the provisions of the Real Property Act. Mr. Lingen appeared for the respondent to show cause.

His HONOR, after hearing the facts set out on either side, said that the matter was a very important one, and he thought it should be settled by the Full Court. It seemed to him a very undesirable thing that he should make the order unless he was absolutely obliged to do so. He did not think he was obliged to make an order in this case for the removal of the caveat, and, as there were confessedly equities on both sides that he had not had an opportunity of inquiring into, if he made an order it might possibly lead to some irreparable injustice; and, therefore, it seemed to him to be the best course to decline to make the order, though he thought the applicant's was the superior position. He would refer the whole matter to the Full Court, where it might be investigated, and he would also grant leave to both sides to fill fresh affidavits; costs of the application to abide the event.

Order accordingly.

In Divorce.—(Before his Honor the CHIEF JUSTICE.)

MITCHELL V. MITCHELL.

Mr. Tarleton appeared for the applicant, Francis John Mitchell, and moved for a rule nisi calling upon the petitioner in the above divorce suit to show cause why the respondent (applicant) should not be released from gaol.

His HONOR said that he had no power to vary the decree in this case, but if all the parties consented he could make an order for the discharge of the applicant.

INSOLVENCY COURT.—FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 30.

(Before the REGISTRAR.)

THIRD MEETINGS.

In re John Schefer, Hugh Roxburgh, and George Lawson Langland Roxburgh, William Anlezark, and Walter John Douglas. No debts were proved, no directions were given, and the meetings terminated.

In re Thomas Wheatley. One debt was proved, and written directions were given that insolvent should be allowed his furniture and wearing apparel. The meeting then terminated.

SINGLE MEETINGS.

In re John Howlett Hubbard. Insolvent attended, and did not desire to amend his schedule. One debt was proved, no directions were given, and the meeting closed.

In re Eric Gustav Isberg. Insolvent was present, and did not desire to amend his schedule or statement under rule 20. No debts were proved and the meeting terminated.

In re Alfred Lester. Insolvent attended, and did not desire to amend his schedule. No debts were proved, and the meeting terminated.

SECOND MEETINGS.

In re William Edward Warren. Insolvent was present and desired to amend his schedule in parts A and D. Four debts were proved, and the meeting terminated.

In re Richard Kelly. Insolvent was present and amended part D of his schedule by adding two debts. Four debts were proved, and the meeting was adjourned to the 5th October.

In re John Woodward. Insolvent did not desire to amend his schedule. Two debts were proved, and the meeting closed.

In re William Walton. Insolvent amended parts B, C, and D of his schedule, but did not desire to amend his statement under rule 20. No debts were proved, and the meeting closed.

SPECIAL MEETINGS FOR PROOF, &C.

In re William Clare. One debt was proved; no directions were given, and the meeting terminated.

In re Samuel Gregory Bowler. Two debts were proved, and the meeting terminated.

In re Thomas John Chapman. Two debts were proved, and three were ordered to stand over. The meeting was then adjourned to the 10th October.

In re John Cecil Brown. One debt was proved, and the meeting closed.

In re Robert Moody and Mark Aarons. Two debts were proved, and the meeting closed.

SURRENDERS.

Mary Anne Wilcox, of Dallinghs, South Grafton, widow. Liabilities, £6016 3s. 4d.; assets, £392 10s. Mr. L. T. Lloyd, official assignee.

Elias Cohen, of 751, George-street South, storekeeper. Liabilities, £701; assets, £93.

Reginald John Harry Beaumont, late of Lismore. Liabilities, £2462; assets, £24.

DISTRICT COURT.—FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 30.

(Before his Honor Judge WILKINSON.)

JONES V. BURNS.

Mr. S. J. Bull for plaintiff, and Mr. Field (instructed by Messrs. M'Culloch and M'Culloch) for defendant. This was a Supreme Court issue. It appears that Alexander Burns, timber merchant, recently sued James Dalzel, of the Glebe, dray proprietor, upon a promissory note for £40. Verdict went by default in the Supreme Court, and then a distress was issued. The present plaintiff, James Jones, of Rookwood, then issued an interpleader summons claiming that the goods which were seized, consisting of a horse, dray, harness, &c., were his. He stated that he purchased them from Dalzel for £60. A document was drawn up by a man of the name of Prenderville, and the money passed between them, plaintiff driving the horse and cart away to Rookwood. Two or three days afterwards he stated that Dalzel came to him and said he was disappointed in not getting a situation he thought of when he sold these things, and agreed to give plaintiff £1 per week for the use of the whole plant. The contract of sale was put in, and also receipts for £1 per week from July to September.

The defence was that the purchase by the plaintiff was not a bona fide one.

A large number of witnesses were examined, and his Honor gave a verdict for the defendant Burns.

JOHNSTON V. WATT.

Plaintiff sued defendant for the recovery of £25, on the ground that he had not, upon quitting a house in Underwood-street, Paddington, after having it on lease, left it in good repair, and because of which it had since remained unlet. The defence was that the House remained unlet simply because plaintiff charged a high rent. His Honor non-suited plaintiff.

Second Court.—(Before his Honor Judge DOWLING.)

HENRY V. SMITH.

The plaintiff in this case was Ivan Henry, a hotel broker, and the defendant was Honorah Smith, of the Friend-in-Hand Hotel, Glebe. The plaintiff claimed the sum of £36 18s. 9d., for commission due on the sale of the Friend-in-Hand Hotel to a Mr. Blanchfield, which plaintiff maintained had been effected through his agency.

Mr. Field, instructed by Mr. J. M. Curtis, appeared for the plaintiff; and Mr. Gannon for the defendant.

His HONOR, who had reserved his decision from the previous day, gave a verdict for the defendant.

JOHNSON V. BARLOW.

Benjamin Alfred Johnson, Miller-street, North Shore, sued Martin Barlow, of the Palace Hotel, for £20 for work done. The defence was that the work, which was painting, had not been properly performed. Mr. Reid, instructed by Mr. A. J. Brady, defended. His Honor gave a verdict for the defendant.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

The following are the cases which have been set down for hearing at the Metropolitan Court of Quarter Sessions, the sittings of which are to be formally commenced at, and adjourned

DEPUTATIONS.

THE COALFIELDS REGULATION BILL.

A deputation, consisting of Mr. Ellis, M.L.A., Mr. T. Walker, M.L.A., Mr. Bennett (Mayor of Wickham), Mr. Gilmore (Mayor of Waliseud), Mr. Rae (Mayor of Hamilton), Mr. Scholey (Mayor of Waratah), Mr. Evans (Mayor of Adamstown), Alderman Weir, of Adamstown, and Mr. Rogers, secretary to the vigilance committee at Wickham, waited upon the Minister for Mines yesterday to suggest several amendments to the proposed Coalfields Regulation Bill which is about to be introduced into Parliament.

The deputation presented the following petition, which they asked the Minister to consider:—"To the Hon. the Minister for Mines. Sir,—Your petitioners, viewing with grave apprehension and alarm the extent of the injury to property and jeopardy to human life existing throughout the several municipalities in the Newcastle district, and caused by the careless and reckless undermining for coal, as carried on in our midst and elsewhere, humbly sheweth the necessity of an amended Coalfields Regulation Bill being introduced on an early date, with a view to minimising this and other kindred evils in connection therewith, and which of late have been thrust upon the public attention. Your petitioners do hereby further memorialise you to accede to the desires of their constituents by embodying in your contemplated new Coalfields Regulation Bill the subjoined clauses as adopted at a municipal conference held at Wickham on Saturday, the 27th day of August, 1887. And, as in duty bound, your petitioners will ever pray." They also submitted the following proposed amendments in and additions to the Coal-fields Regulation Bill, as adapted at the recent conference:—Clause 5 from line 18, beginning "Every such copy or tracing," to read: "Every such copy or tracing shall be deposited with the keeper of mining records, and duplicates of same with municipal councils where the interests of such councils are or may be affected, and only produced when required in courts of law or within council chambers, when such councils shall determine same to be in the interests of the municipality. And any mine owner, agent, or manager concealing or withholding information or facilities toward such inspection and plans, shall be deemed guilty of an offence against this Act and liable to a penalty not exceeding one hundred pounds (£100). Clause 6.—New Clause (Criminal Proceedings and Penalty): "If, after an inspection, the accuracy of any plan is questioned by the Inspector or Examiner of Coalfields, it shall be lawful for the Inspector or Examiner of Coalfields to order a survey so as to decide the matter, and if it has been found that an encroachment; has been made, and coal or other mineral extracted, it will devolve upon the Inspector of Coalfields to at once apprise the owner or owners of same that such is the case, and he shall at once institute criminal proceedings against the mine owners, agents, managers, or managing directors in any colliery or collieries which at the time was or were so situated as to give free access to the area of encroachment, and any mine owners, agents, managers, or managing directors making such encroachment shall be deemed guilty of a criminal offence against this Act, and shall on conviction be liable to a penalty of not less than one and not exceeding five years' imprisonment, with or without hard labour, or the mitigated penalty of one hundred (£100) and not exceeding one thousand pounds (£1000) with one pound (£1) for every ton of coal or other mineral so disturbed or removed." Clause 39, to delete clause 38, and insert, "To ensure the better safety of roads, streets, bridges, public and other buildings within municipalities, no coal or other mineral shall be taken from under same until permission has been applied for and granted by the municipal council where the mining is to be carried on, who will also determine on the report of the local inspector or other independent surveyor appointed by and answerable to such councils, the manner and extent of the workings, with the nature of the after supports. Municipal councils may combine in maintaining a surveyor who shall have the same privileges of inspection and survey as appertain to the Government inspector; and any mine owner, agent, or manager concealing or withholding information or facilities towards such inspection and plans shall be deemed guilty of an offence against this Act, and liable to a penalty not exceeding one hundred pounds (£100)."

After hearing the arguments in support of the prayer of the petition and the proposed amendments,

Mr. ABIGAIL said, in reference to the terms of the petition, he would like to thank the gentlemen before him for bringing these matters under notice. A request was made by the Department to those interested in the question of coalfields and their surroundings to make known to the Department any suggestions that they thought might be incorporated in the new Coalfields Regulation Bill. He took it that the deputation, in the expressions of confidence that they had made to-day, were sincere, and that they had no sympathy with other statements that had been made in the Newcastle district, that the thing was all humbug, and that there was no desire or intention on the part of the Government to carry out this measure. He took the opportunity of saying that he, at any rate, recognised the necessity for a new Coalfields Regulation Bill. He had shown that by the fact that it was one of the first measures he gave attention to when he took this position. That, at any rate, was some guarantee of his sincerity in desiring to bring this forward. The second step he took was to invite both miners and coal proprietors, when it was resolved to frame such a bill, to make any suggestions. At the same time he did not bind the department to incorporate the suggestions in the new bill. A large number of suggestions had been sent, and he thanked those who had forwarded them. Many of them would be incorporated in some form or other in the bill, but come of them would not, and amongst those that would not be incorporated was one of those submitted to-day. Proper steps would be taken to ensure the fulfilment of the law, but no steps would be taken to instruct any inspector of coalfields, in the event of non-fulfilment, to at once institute criminal proceedings against anybody. A clause of that character would be so obnoxious that no Parliament would pass it into law. Circumstances might occur where the law would not be fulfilled, and yet no person might be criminally liable for its non-fulfilment. Such a provision as the following would jeopardise the bill:—"If, after an inspection, the accuracy of any plan is questioned by the inspector or examiner of coalfields, it shall be lawful for the inspector or examiner of coalfields to order a survey, so as to decide the matter; and if it has been found that an encroachment has been made, and coal or other mineral extracted, it will devolve upon the inspector of coalfields to at once apprise the owner or owners of same that such is the case, and he shall at once institute criminal proceedings." He must, with his sincere desire to pass this bill and clear knowledge of the necessity for passing it, hesitate before putting in any clause that would probably lead to its being thrown out. He took this action in the interests of the men who were employed in coal mining, and he would have provision made in the bill that when the law was disregarded steps should be taken to punish those who disregarded it. (Hear, hear.) With regard to the copy or tracing of any plan, he did not think they could go so far as set forth here, but it would certainly be made very clear that the tracing should be open to inspection. In the case of any proceedings arising, of course that plan would be produced in Court, and a clause would be provided to make it easy to proceed against anybody who disobeyed the law. With reference to the mining under roads, he had frequently stated what his feelings were about that. When he informed them that he viewed with alarm what had taken place, they might rest assured that the Government would make the statute very clear indeed regarding this. Municipalities would be given the fullest powers to protect the streets and roads in their respective districts. He hoped in a short time to place the measure before Parliament, although he did not claim that it was a perfect measure, he thought it would be found that it had been framed with the object of protecting lives and property, and at the same time so as to operate not in anything like a tyrannical or unnecessarily harsh manner against those who had the employing of labour. The Government had two parties to serve in the matter as well as the country, and they desired to pass a reasonable measure—one under which people could safely invest their money in the development of coal mines, and one under which the practical miners could pursue their arduous occupation with some degree of safety.

ADAMSTOWN RECREATION RESERVE.

Mr. Walker, M.L.A., the Mayor of Adamstown, and Alderman Weir interviewed the Minister for Mines yesterday respecting a promise of £300 for the improvement of the recreation reserve adjoining the town, which had been promised by Mr. Abigail's predecessor in office, and had not been forthcoming. The members of the deputation were anxious to know if anything stood in the way of their getting that sum.

Mr. ABIGAIL said he believed some promise was made, but the land had not been dedicated as a reserve, and until the dedication took place no money could be granted out of the vote. The matter would be brought under the notice of the Lands Department, and upon the dedication being completed the claims of the people of Adamstown in the matter would not be overlooked in the next vote.

RAILWAY FROM JERILDERIE TO DENILIQUIN

A deputation, representing the Deniliquin Railway League, was introduced to the Minister for Works yesterday afternoon by Mr. Barbour, M.L.A., with the object of urging on him the advisableness of constructing a railway from Jerilderie to Deniliquin. The deputation consisted of Messrs. Melville, Walker, and O'Sullivan, M.L.A.; Mr. Evans, chairman of the Deniliquin Railway League; Mr. Chandler, Mayor of Deniliquin; and Alderman Jamieson, of Deniliquin.

Mr. BARBOUR, having introduced the deputation, Mr. Evans presented a petition in favour of the line, signed by upwards of 400 residents of the district, and by a number of the principal Sydney merchants. The petition, which fully set forth the natural advantages of the district, and the importance of railway communication with it, has already appeared, in substance, in a previous issue of this paper.

Mr. CHANDLER pointed out that railway extension was required to develop the agricultural interests of the district, which was a very fertile one. They wished to reach their own natural market, the back country lying behind Hay, where agricultural produce could not be grown, and to obtain access to which a railway line was necessary. The line would also place the district in communication with Sydney, which was very desirable, not only from a patriotic but commercial point of view, as the residents wished to trade with Sydney instead of with Melbourne, but were debarred from doing so by the high rates of cartage and the bad roads. The sleepers required for the line could be obtained from the gum forests in the neighbourhood at a very low rate.

Mr. JAMIESON also spoke in favour of the line, and pointed out that the Sydney traders were in favour of it. He urged that as there was no properly constructed main road, it would be less expensive to put down a railway instead of making a road, to properly construct which would cost more than a railway. The principal landholders of the district had not only offered to give the land required for the line free; but some of them had offered to subsidise it, one gentleman having offered to give £1000, and another gentleman £500. The district was a well known wheat-producing one, but there was at present no means of disposing of the produce.

Mr. BARBOUR also spoke strongly in favour of the line, stating that instead of benefiting Melbourne, as many people supposed would be the case if the line were constructed, it would be found that much of the trade which now went to Melbourne would be diverted to Sydney.

Mr. Melville and Mr. O'Sullivan, as gentlemen who had visited the district, corroborated the statements of the other members of the deputation.

Mr. SUTHERLAND said that the representations they had made to him and the petition which they had presented, would be duly considered, and he would have a report made on the scheme. His duty was simply to collect evidence, and lay it before the Cabinet, and he would have this done.

THE COLONIAL MANUFACTURE OF LOCOMOTIVES.

A deputation representing the principal colonial manufacturers of locomotives was introduced to the Minister for Works yesterday morning by Mr. Jacob Garrard, M.L.A., in reference to the tenders for locomotives which were called for by the Government some months ago. The deputation consisted of Messrs. Hawthorne, F. Smith, and Jeanneret, M.s.L.A., Franki, H. Hudson, Mort, Vale, Morris, Edgerton, and Captain Broomfield.

Mr. GARRARD, in introducing the deputation, said that the question was a vexed one, and he would not go over the ground again. The Parliament had, some months ago, decided that a certain number of locomotives should be manufactured in the colony, and tenders had been called for them. The gentlemen present represented the principal engineering firms of the colony, who had tendered for these locomotives, and they were tired at the delay in coming to a decision. In addition, they had heard murmurs, through the press and otherwise, that an officer of the Government proposed to have these locomotives manufactured in the Government workshops. The deputation had come to show reason why this should not be done, as the Government should not compete with private enterprise any more than could be helped.

Mr. H. HUDSON said that it was something like five months since the tenders had been first submitted for these locomotives. Their business to-day was to get some information as to what was likely to be the result of the labour they had gone to preparing these tenders. Of course they knew that the work was a very important one, and were quite prepared to wait any reasonable time; but they thought that five months was long enough for a decision to be arrived at. It had been reported that the engines were going to be made in the Government workshops; but he hoped that this was not going to be done, as it would not be desirable for many reasons, and would most seriously interfere with the relations between capital and labour. If private competition could be entrusted to make the railroads, they could surely trust private competition to make the engines to run on them. In Victoria the locomotives for the department were made in private workshops, and he submitted that the engineering works in New South Wales were not behind those in Victoria.

Captain BROOMFIELD, as the representative of Mort's Dock Engineering Company, also addressed the Minister. He said that if the Government would pay 5 per cent. as a bonus on the cost of the engines, they would be prepared to undertake their construction.

Mr. HAWTHORNE expressed his sympathy with the objects of the deputation, and said that he was present to assist them in having these locomotives built in the workshops round Sydney. He maintained that the Government could not manufacture locomotives at the same price as the private workshops.

Mr. F. SMITH and Mr. JEANNERET also spoke in support of the request of the deputation.

Mr. SUTHERLAND, in reply, said that he did not know that he could say anything more than he had done on a previous occasion. The matter was a difficult one to decide, and nothing had been done up to the present. He had always been in favour of this class of work being done in the colony, if it could be made at anything like the same price as the imported article. It had been said that the Government intended to manufacture these engines in the workshops at Eveleigh, but the fact was that the Government had come to no decision as yet. The prices which the colonial tenderers had sent in were much above what the Government expected, and if the engines were to be made by contract they would have to come from the other side of the water. Since he had been in office everything which he had had manufactured in the colony had been made cheaper than the imported article, and therefore he was rather surprised that he was in this position with regard to these engines. He did not want to have these locomotives manufactured in the Government workshops if they could be made in the private shops, but rather than let them go out of the colony, he would have the work done in the Government workshops. As far as he was concerned, the object of employing the people on our own manufactures would be gained in either case, as long as the work could be done at or near the price for which the engines could be imported, and he would not have the work done in the colony on any other principle. The local manufacturers had had an opportunity of tendering, and their tenders were much higher than those from abroad. The question would simply be for the Government to consider whether they would give a large bonus to the manufacturers of the country for this work or not. He had given his opinion on this before to-day, and would never advise its being done, but at the same time he would never advise going out of the country for the work if it could be avoided.

Mr. HAWTHORNE asked Mr. Sutherland if he would consider the proposition made by a member of the deputation, to manufacture these locomotives for 5 per cent. on the outlay.

Mr. SUTHERLAND said that he would put this offer fairly before the Government, but would prefer to have the offer made in writing.

TRAMWAY TO ADAMSTOWN.

A deputation representing the Adamstown Borough Council waited on the Minister for Works yesterday afternoon, to request that the Minister would construct a tramline from Broadmeadows to Adamstown. Messrs. Walker and Melville, M.s.L.A., introduced the deputation, and pointed out the advantages which would accrue from the construction of this work, which would serve a largely populated and important district. The construction of a circular line was advocated, starting from Broadmeadows, and thence to Adamstown and the Glebe, returning to Newcastle by the Honeysuckle-road. The route suggested was pointed out to the Minister on a map.

Mr. SUTHERLAND suggested that a marked plan showing the route the deputation proposed should be sent in to him, and he would then give the matter his fullest consideration.

THE WHALING-ROAD.

A deputation of residents of North Shore, introduced by Mr. J. E. Ives, M.L.A., waited upon the Hon. Thomas Garrett (Minister for Lands) yesterday afternoon to ask that steps might be taken by the Government to open the Whaling-road. Mr. Garrett, in reply to the deputation, pointed out that some years ago the question of opening this road was referred to the Crown Law Officers for an opinion. Since then nothing further had been done in the matter. He had again referred the question to the same authorities, and until he had received the necessary report from them he could not deal with it.

HARP-STREET, CANTERBURY.

A deputation, consisting of Messrs. Carruthers, Hutchinson, and Henson, M.s.L.A., and some of the aldermen of Caterbury, waited upon the Hon. Thomas Garrett (Minister for Lands) yesterday, for the purpose of asking the Government to open Harp-street, Canterbury, a thoroughfare running parallel with Canterbury-road, between Sharp-street and Northcote-street. Mr. Garrett, in reply to the deputation, stated that the Government would be prepared to open a portion of this thoroughfare provided the local council fulfilled their part of the contract. He pointed out that the council undertook to pay any demand for compensation made on the proclamation, in the event of valid objections to the alignment being made. Objections had been raised, but the council had not carried out their agreement, and until the obligations were fulfilled the Government could do nothing.

REQUIREMENTS OF PADDINGTON.

A deputation, consisting of the Mayor and aldermen of the Paddington municipality, waited upon the Hon. Thomas Garrett (Minister for Lands) yesterday and asked that steps might be taken by the Government to resume a portion of a Chinaman's garden, in order that Cambridge-street might be continued from the Glenmore-road to the New South Head-road. Mr. Garrett, in reply to the deputation, stated that a very strong case would have to be made out before the Government could do anything in this matter. It was quite clear that a large amount of money would have to be expended upon it, and he would advise the Municipal Council of Paddington to interview the owner of the property, and ascertain all the necessary particulars respecting it. They might then forward the particulars to the Government. At present he could not say whether the Government would do anything in the matter or not.

REMOVAL OF THE CITY POLICE COURT.

The Mayor of Sydney (Alderman A. J. Riley), and Aldermen Palmer, Hart, Hardie, Burdekin, Jones, Poole, Meeks, Buckle, Jeannerot, Taylor, Macmahon, J. Young, Playfair, and the Town Clerk (Mr. Daniels), waited upon the Premier yesterday in reference to the removal of the City Police Court and lock-up.

The MAYOR, who introduced the deputation, read the resolution passed by the City Council on the 7th instant, requesting the Government to remove the City Police Court and watchhouse, and throw the site open for some suitable memorial of the centenary year, under the auspices of the council. He considered that the time had arrived when that portion of the city covered by the unsightly police court and markets should be improved, and that was the general desire of the representatives of the citizens. They had no wish to enter into conflict with the Government regarding the site, they only wanted to assist the Government in beautifying the locality. They wanted the Government to take down the buildings referred to and erect something that would be a worthy memorial of the centenary; and when that was done the city corporation would undertake the responsibility of maintaining it in good order ever afterwards. [Sir HENRY PARKES: Do you want the Government to erect buildings at public cost?] That was their wish.

Alderman BURDEKIN said he hoped the site would not be used for market purposes. He believed that it was ultimately intended for an underground railway. There was no reason now, however, why the square should not be given up to the city for ornamental purposes.

Alderman MEEKS considered it would be a great boon to the city to have the site of the police court and lock-up handed over to the corporation, so that it might be made beautiful.

Alderman J. YOUNG pointed out that while a new police court was being erected a temporary structure could be put up on the present site to answer the requirements. He hoped to see the old buildings now standing there pulled down very soon.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply, said that the object of the deputation, as he understood it, was to ascertain whether the Government was disposed to give up the land occupied by the Central Police Office. If the Government decided on such a step being taken, he thought they might leave the council to pull down the building, at the same time charging them (the council) for the bricks. (Laughter.) He promised that the application to give up the site to the corporation would be considered by the Government. In regard to erecting a temporary building, he had no doubt that during the centennial year the people would behave themselves so well that there would be no use for a police court. (Laughter.)

GRIEVANCE OF THE BOTANY DAIRYMEN.

A deputation from the Botany dairymen, consisting of Messrs. Schey, M.L.A., R. Peel, J. Sawle, jun., C. A. Garden, and A. Laycock, interviewed the Premier yesterday on the subject of their water supply.

Mr. SCHEY, who introduced the deputation, said the dairymen came to protest against the action being taken by the police in carrying out what, it was assumed, were the instructions of the Board of Health. They considered the police were acting in a most unreasonable and unjustifiable manner. While the dairymen acknowledged that it was perfectly right in the interests of the public health to remove or destroy anything of a dangerous character, they were inclined to think that the police were exceeding their powers in peremptorily ordering them to destroy their wells. The police entered their premises, and without giving any notice took samples of water, and then compelled the dairymen to destroy their wells, so that the water could not be used for any purpose whatever. Many of the dairies had no other water supply, and it was a great hardship to them to be compelled to destroy their wells in such a fashion.

Sir HENRY PARKES: Have the police in the case of any of you destroyed a well?

Mr. SAWLE: Yes, sir [handing the Premier the notice he received]. They compelled me to pull down the pump and throw the bricks into the well. They said I could not use the water for any purpose whatever until the water was analysed. I could mention a dozen men who have had their wells closed in a similar way.

Sir HENRY PARKES: The only thing I can say is that I will have the matter inquired into at once. I will send for the Inspector-General of Police, and probably see some member of the Board of Health to see what can be done. I am very sorry that you should be submitted to any hardship. If it is necessary for the public health that your wells should be destroyed, you are entitled to every consideration in getting some other water supply.

RANDWICK POLICE PROTECTION.

Messrs. Allen and Trickett, M.s.L.A., and the Mayor of Randwick waited on the Premier yesterday, and requested that they should have two more policemen at that place. They had but three at present, one of whom was the watch-house-keeper. Mr. Trickett said the Inspector-General of Police had admitted the necessity for more police in the Eastern suburbs.

Sir HENRY PARKES promised to see the Inspector-General of Police on the matter.

THE "UNEMPLOYED" AT ADAMSTOWN.

Mr. Walker, M.L.A., and Aldermen Evans (Mayor of Adamstown) and Ware waited on the Premier yesterday, and asked that the "unemployed" at Adamstown might be allowed to continue work there on the usual conditions—the Government paying half the wages for two months longer.

Sir HENRY PARKES, in reply, acceded to their request, but said it would only be for two months longer.

THE METROPOLITAN HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY.

A deputation, representing the Metropolitan Horticultural Society, consisting of Messrs. Burdekin, M.L.A., Alderman J. Young, S. C. Lindley, H. Fain, J. H. Beatson, and Captain Bloomfield, requested the Premier yesterday to give the society an annual subsidy, on the usual conditions of pound for pound of revenue. They claimed that they were entitled to subsidy, and pointed out that similar societies in Melbourne, Brisbane, and Adelaide were subsidised by their respective Governments. Their revenue last year was £340.

Sir HENRY PARKES promised to submit the request for consideration to his colleagues.

THE CHINESE IN TRAMCARS.

A deputation representing the Botany Progress Association was introduced to the Minister for Works yesterday morning by Messrs. Stevens and Schey, M.s.L.A., with the object of drawing attention to an evil on the Botany tram which was now becoming intolerable—the mixing of the Chinese with European passengers on the tram-cars. The Chinese travelled in large numbers, and their presence was frequently most objectionable. The by-laws provided that any passenger who was offensive to other passengers might be removed from the tram-car, but there was no provision made for removing them to any other part of the cars. The deputation therefore asked that regulations should be issued by which a separate compartment would be set apart for Chinese passengers, in which they might be compelled to travel. It was pointed out that great danger existed to the public health by allowing the Chinese to ride in the cars, disseminating the disease germs with which the clothing of many of them was saturated. The deputation also asked that the sanitary regulations which were enforced with regard to the European portion of the population should also be enforced with Chinese, as it was absolutely necessary that their dwelling-houses shold be inspected, and that they should be made to live in the same way as the European population.

Mr. SUTHERLAND, in reply, said that the matter was a very awkward one to interfere with further than they had already done. Some of the Chinese, it was admitted, were quite respectable and cleanly. He agreed with the deputation with regard to the necessity for inspection of the Chinese quarters. As far as the Chinese passengers on the tram-cars were concerned, the Government had ample power to deal with the matter under the by-laws, if the conductors carried out their duty. He would consult with the Commissioner, and would do the best he could to assist them in the matter, and he would consider whether a separate compartment could be set apart for Chinese.

THE BOTANY TRAM.

A deputation from residents of Redfern, consisting of the Rev. H. Mack and several other gentlemen, waited on the Minister for Works yesterday morning. The object of the deputation, as explained by the members of it, was to protest against the proposed extension of the two-penny section on the Botany tram from the corner of Castlereagh-street and Redfern-street to the Botany-road. It was considered by the deputation that this alteration was not desirable, and was not asked for by the travelling public. Under the present arrangement there was every convenience and provision for passengers waiting at the end of the section, but if the length of the section were altered, this would not be the case. The extension would make the first section on this line out of all proportion in length with the first sections on other lines.

Mr. SUTHERLAND, in reply, said that this alteration had been asked for by the public of Redfern, and had been carried out by the department at their request. Now, the very day before the alteration took place, they were asked to alter it; but this could not be done at once. He could not accede to their request now, as he would have to give the new alteration a fair trial first.

EDEN TO BEGA RAILWAY.

A deputation representing the Eden and Bega districts was introduced to the Minister for Works yesterday morning by Mr. H. Clarke, M.L.A. The deputation consisted of Mr. Garvan, M.L.A.; Mr. Reden, Mayor of Bega; and Mr. Reilly, representing the Eden league.

Mr. CLARKE, in introducing the deputation, explained that its object was to obtain an expression of opinion from the Minister with regard to the continuation of the coast railway system to Bega. A petition in favour of the line, and statistics with regard to the district, had already been laid before the Minister, and it would be unnecessary for him to go into it again. The continuation of the line would be of great benefit to the district, and it had already passed the House in 1884. The plans and specifications were, he believed, now ready, and it only required the sanction of the Ministry to go on with the work.

Mr. GARVAN spoke with reference to the great importance of the district, and pointed out that the large quantity of produce which would be sent from the district would make the railway remunerative. The Government had also sold a large quantity of land in the district, and this gave it an addional claim for the railway. Then they had a magnificent port, the best in the southern portion of New South Wales, and the railway was justifiable on this basis. He strongly urged on the Minister the construction of this line.

The other members of the deputation also addressed the Minister in favour of the construction of the line.

Mr. SUTHERLAND said that they knew very well that he could not give them an answer at once, as all he had to do was simply to collect the best evidence he could with regard to the line, and lay it before the Cabinet, who had to decide whether the line should be constructed or not. He had now through their assistance a great deal of information with regard to the line, which he would put before the Cabinet.

THE OLD CANTERBURY-ROAD.

A deputation from the Petersham Borough Council was introduced to the Minister for Works yesterday morning by Mr. Davis, M.L.A., with the object of drawing the Minister's attention to the deplorable state of the Old Canterbury Road. The road, it was stated by the several members of the deputation, passed through the Borough of Petersham, and also through Ashfield and the centre of Canterbury. The sum allowed to the Petersham Corporation—£75 per annum—for maintaining the road was not anything like sufficient to keep it in order, and unless the Government could increase the sum the council would be obliged to decline accepting the responsibility of looking after the road.

Mr. SUTHERLAND said that he had been over this road himself, and it certainly was in a very bad state. There was, however, no money in the Treasury for the roads, as every halfpenny voted for the remainder of this year had been distributed. He would promise, however, to consider the matter when the Estimates were being prepared, and this was all he could do for them.

NORTH WILLOUGHBY COUNCIL.

A meeting of the ratepayers of North Willoughby was held at the School of Arts, Mowbray-road, yesterday evening, for the purpose of enabling the two gentlemen who were getting a petition signed, asking the Government to have a special audit of the accounts of the borough, to explain to the ratepayers their reasons for such action, and to enable the council and auditors of the borough to explain what a special audit meant, and that such special audit was not required. Mr. Frank Treatt was elected to the chair, and the following gentlemen occupied seats on the platform. Aldermen Thomas Forsyth (Mayor), Simpson, Welch, Fleming, and Mr. Anderson, council clerk. About fifty ratepayers attended the meeting.

The CHAIRMAN briefly opened the meeting, pointing out the importance of the occasion. He then read the clauses of the Municipal Act which referred to the holding of special audits.

Mr. LAUNDERS said that his reasons for requiring a special audit were because he thought such an inquiry as that authorised under the 184th clause of the Municipal Act of 1867 would be highly beneficial in correcting any possible infringements or omissions by the council in connection with its provisions. The inquiry, he believed, was highly necessary at present, the council having already borrowed £3000, and being about to borrow £2000 more at once, and because they were contemplating, it was rumoured, obtaining authority for a further loan of £10,000. He stated that the records and papers, &c., of the council were kept in a small back room in the private dwelling of the council clerk. The council clerk also, it was understood, gave no security. He maintained that the check on the receipt of moneys by the council clerk was most defective, as the receipt was written on the rate-papers themselves, instead of a special receipt-book being kept, as was the case in other municipalities.

Mr. HOBSON said that he based his claim for a special audit, partly on the assertions of the aldermen and partly on his personal observations of the method of conducting the council's business during the past two years. He considered that the ordinary meetings of the council were conducted in a go-as-you-please style in which the council clerk did all the talking and the aldermen all the listening. The reasons for a special audit embodied in the petition to his Excellency were as follows:—"1. That the council's auditors, in their report dated September, 1886, stated 'that no running account of the rates and taxes which should show in a simple form the amount of taxes and out-standing debts at the end of each half-year has been appended to the statement of revenue and expenditure, and your auditors consequently feel justified in assuming that a check over the out-standing rates is looked after by the mayor and aldermen themselves.' 2. According to the statement of Alderman Palmer, no cash book is kept by the City Council. 3. At the council meeting held on September 13, Alderman Welch stated that in consequence of the clerk not keeping a proper tender book, the treasurer had signed cheques for large payments about which he knew nothing. He thought these were good and sufficient grounds for the proceedings he had taken. He had made inquiries about the cost of an audit, and found that an audit extending over the past seven years would only cost about £50. The outlay was small, and he thought that there was no gainsaying it was a necessary one.

Alderman FORSYTH said that the Council had only decided to borrow £2000 at the last council meeting, whilst the petition had been in circulation for some weeks. Yet the borrowing of this money was given as one of the reasons for calling for an audit. The audit would cost more than £50, and if Mr. Hobson would pay what it cost over that sum, he (the speaker) would be willing to consent to the audit.

Alderman FLEMING said that the gentlemen, believing the accounts were wrong, should have called a public meeting to inquire into the matter. With regard to the audit, he had written to Newcastle, where they had been foolish enough to call for a special audit, and found that the audit taken there in 1870 cost £700, which the council were called upon to pay. How could a gentleman come here and tell them that an audit could be taken for £50? The audit would have to extend over the whole time the borough had been in existance—22 years—and could not be taken for seven years only. He contended that the money which would be spent in this special audit would be far better laid out improving the roads and giving employment to the people. The accounts had been thoroughly gone through by the auditors of the borough. They had been told that the council intended to borrow £10,000, but he might tell them that the council had no power to do it. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. LUDOWISKE also addressed the meeting, protesting against the taking of a special audit as unnecessary and expensive.

Alderman WELCH suggested that if the ratepayers thought there was anything wrong with the council's books, they should appoint three or four of their number to examine the books, and then, if there appeared to be anything irregular in them, they could call for a special audit, and he would not object to it.

Alderman SIMPSON expressed his entire confidence in the work done by the council.

Mr. SMALL, as one of the borough auditors, said that he had never examined a set of books which were kept more correctly than the books of this borough.

After some further discussion, Mr. MUSTON moved,—"That this meeting recommend the Mayor and aldermen to vote a sum of not exceeding £50 for the investigation of the council's books for the last five years, by a public accountant."

Mr. ROBERTS seconded the motion; and an amendment moved by ASHER, and seconded by Mr. SANDERSON, to the effect that a special audit be asked for, was put to the meeting and lost. The original motion was then put to the meeting and lost by nine votes to seven.

Mr. ANDERSON, Council Clerk, then briefly addressed the meeting in refutation of some of the charges which had been made against him. The meeting shortly afterwards terminated with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

THE LICENSED DRIVERS AND MR. ADDISON.

A public meeting of licensed drivers was held in the Temperance Hall, Pitt-street, last evening, for the purpose of taking into consideration the reply of the Minister for Justice to the deputation of licensees who waited upon him relative to a recent decision of Mr. G. W. F. Addison, S.M., at the Water Police Court. The chair was occupied by Mr. C. Prince. There was a fair attendance. It will be remembered that after the deputation had placed their grievances before the Minister, a reply was received by Mr. Mansfield and others from Mr. Clarke, to the effect that Mr. Addison denied the charges that had been preferred against him of having dealt injustly in certain cases which were mentioned to the Minister, and that he (Mr. Clarke) was perfectly satisfied with the explanations furnished by the magistrate in regard to the matters complained of by the deputation.

The CHAIRMAN, who was well received, said it was with a feeling of pleasure that he presided over the meeting, because he thought an injustice had been done to the drivers (Hear, hear.) He considered the injustice they complained of ought to be remedied at once. (Hear, hear.) He was sorry to find that out of a body of men numbering over 2000 more of them had not made an effort to attend the meeting in order to consider matters which vitally affected their own interests. He concluded by reading the reply of the Minister for Justice to the deputation.

Mr. THOMAS WESTLAKE moved the first resolution, which read as follows,—"That this meeting desires to enter its protest against the reply given to the deputation of licensed drivers by the Hon. W. Clarke (Minister for Justice) relative to the remarks of Mr. G. W. F. Addison, S.M., to licensed drivers when summoned at the Police Courts." The speaker said that the drivers wanted justice dealt out to them, and if they had this they would be perfectly satised. After referring to certain disabilities under which he said the cabmen and others laboured, he stated that he had been very unjustly dealt with at the Water Police Court two or three weeks ago. He was summoned by a Transit Commission officer for leaving his horse in the street. He appeared at the court, and the magistrate (Mr. Addison) told him that if he pleaded not guilty and he found him guilty, he would scratch out the fine he had already recorded against another man and fine him double." The consequence was that the man before him was fined £1, with 5s. costs, and he (the speaker) was fined £2, with the court costs, immediately afterwards for the very same offence, simply because he would not plead guilty. He thought that when poor men like the drivers were taken to the court the magistrates should be inclined to assist them when they had no lawyer, as many of them could not afford to pay a solicitor to watch their interests.

Mr. F. B. MANSFIELD seconded the resolution. As one of the deputation that waited upon the Minister for Justice, he did not consider it was right for that gentleman to send a reply worded in such terms to a body of men like the licensed drivers. (Hear, hear.) That reply made it appear that the members of the deputation went to the Minister with falsehoods in their mouths. In answer to that, he could say that no member of the deputation would make a wrongful accusation against any magistrate. (Hear, hear.) He knew from past experience that it was a common thing for Mr. Addison to deal in a hard manner with the cabmen. He had heard him say to the men who were brought before him, "Go on: follow your leader, and I will fine you double." The drivers had been treated unjustly by a man whom he considered to be little less than a tyrant on the bench.

The resolution was unanimously agreed to.

Mr. J. DOWNEY moved,—"That a petition, signed by the chairman of this meeting, on behalf of the licensed drivers of Sydney, be presented to the Legislative Assembly, asking for the appointment of a select committee to inquire into the conduct of Mr. G. W. Addison, S.M., relative to remarks made by him in his capacity as magistrate when adjudicating in the Police Courts re licensed drivers." (Applause.)

Mr. W. ARMSTRONG seconded the resolution, which was carried amidst great applause. A gentleman named Cook here informed the meeting that he could corroborate what had been said by Mr. Westlake, as he was in Court at the time Mr. Addison spoke to him.

The meeting terminated with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

AS YOU LIKE IT.

"Ay, marry, now unmuzzle your wisdom."—ROSALIND.

It was said of one of our old-time legislators, who had elevated the detail of Opposition tactics almost to the dignity of a science—the late Mr. William Forster—that even the Resurrection itself would have no countenance or encouragement from him unless he could "rise to a point of order." Has Mr. Forster's mantle fallen on the Hon. Thomas Garrett? or was Wednesday night's business with its innumerable interruptions ostensibly in the interests, but really in despite, of "order," only an example of that wholesome desipience which I have so often counselled as an alterative, when the system gets clogged by the secretions of wisdom. I can well understand that Mr. Garrett after his Land Bill birth pangs stands sorely in need of a change. Human nature must have its distractions, even when it takes the form of a legislator. Let no one therefore, not even Mr. Melville, call a member of Parliament engaged in thus relieving himself, an "irrepressible jackanapes." Of course this conjecture may be wide of the bull's eye—as is sometimes the misfortune of the best artists of hypothesis. And Mr. Garrett's risings to order may have been an experiment in some new scheme of governing Parliament, which might be called the Deus ex machina or Jack-in-the-box scheme. If this be the case, though I can hardly think it possible, I recommend this "old Parliamentary hand," to take the advice of a Roman gentlemen who flourished a good many years ago—which the little boy belonging to Murga would perhaps translate, "Don't spring a Jack-in-the-box in the cat's face unless you catch her lapping the baby's milk, and you want to give her a big fright." But, apart from all other considerations, Mr. Garrett should have some consideration for Mr. Speaker, who is not at his best in smoothing out points even with "May" under his nose. It's bad enough to have to get the House out of the bogs and ruts on the highroad without having to stop the team every few minutes to roll stumps out of the way, which some mischievous fellow has been rolling into it.

* * * * *

I suppose every man in Parliament is entitled to the privilege of interrupting every other man by rising to a point of order, or of disorder, as the privilege might perhaps be better named. But has it not been considered rather an Opposition man's weapon than a Minister's or a Ministerialist's? The dignity of office and its supposed responsibilities ought to stop Ministers, one would think, from starting up with quibbles and little demurrers, when an opponent is sharpening his teeth on some little tit-bit that he means to enjoy very much more, because some of his hearers will enjoy it very much less. Why not let the adversary have his say? In nine cases out of ten he will do himself more harm by being allowed his say than the "Pointer" opposite will do his side good by rising intermittently to a point of "order, Mr. Speaker," like a famished trout to a May fly. Every one tells me, nevertheless, that Mr. Garrett is a man of the rarest Parliamentary acumen, and knows more about the practice of Parliament than any half dozen legislators in the Assembly. It may be so. But there is such a thing as being too clever by half, especially when the cleverness is in that kind of fun at which two can play. No, I think that old Secretary of the Treasury—he died many years ago, was wiser in his generation than some of us degenerate politicians. "We must apply our majority to this case, gentlemen, it is too bad, too indefensible for argument," Points of order are a poor way of applying a majority, for the House, before it can do that, has (to use a most objectionable phrase) to "go dog" on its Speaker, which no House likes doing too often.

* * * * *

It will soon become impossible to take up a newspaper without coming upon a fresh injustice—to Ireland? No, but to New South Wales. And, next to an injustice to Ireland, we of this colony feel an injustice to ourselves to follow in order of gravity. The other day Dr. Cameron Lees as good as told the world that this colony and its inhabitants could not be expected to make any sort of a mark in Australian history. And if Mr. Froude had a recognised right to speak, as he has spoken of us, in "Oceana," after an entire fortnight spent between the Australian Club and Admiral Tryon's flagship, surely a Scotch theologian, who is one of the best diners-out under Heaven, has a right to take up his parable after having abstained from putting even his sacerdotal great toe on our soil. And the injustice? Well, it is for Mr. Buckle, of the Times, to explain what he means by making us believe that her Majesty meant to endow us with a floating State House, ready built, and worth ever so much more than £150,000—to the end that we should always possess the means of transport for our "Soudan Expeditions," and use the vast ship for picnics of a "National or Representative Character" when the colony was at peace. And it's all a canard! Of course, the British Government can afford that Cabbage Garden a "Nelson" (to say nothing of a "Cerberus"), but "Nelsons" are not for New South Wales!—the future of Australia, as Dr. Cameron Lees (is Lees Scotch for I—a, by-the-bye?) wrote to the Scotsman, being in Victoria. "Wolverenes" are good enough for New South Wales! And so the State House will have to be built, after all?

* * * * *

"Not if I know it," shouts Mr. Dibbs, leader of Her Majesty's Opposition—(no connection at present with the establishment at the other end of the street.) and, therefore, he gives notice of his intention to introduce a bill to abolish the State House, and spend that £150,000 over new Houses of Parliament. There is more sense about the proposal too than would strike us at first hearing. Everybody knows what the expansive or indiarubber clauses in the Electoral Act are. They have only been in operation six years or so, and have therefore not been productive of more than a couple of dozen members at most. But it is expected that in the course of a few years they will work more satisfactorily; and good judges tell me that you may put them down in five years' time as good for about eight dozen new members. Well, Mr. Dibbs very properly wants accommodation for these "expanders." They could not find perching-room (could they find standing-room?) in the present Chamber unless the Government packed away the Opposition in the big gallery opposite the Speaker—a course which seems to be without Parliamentary precedent, though in other respects convenient. Well, if we are to have it (the new Parliament House), I hope the building will be entrusted to some vulcanised indiarubber company, for the Chamber of the Representatives should harmonise in material with our stretchy Electoral Act. This is no structure for such rigid, intractable substances as granite and bronze.

* * * * *

I am glad to observe that the City Council are beginning thoroughly to awaken to the intolerable nuisance which accompanies the advantages claimed for our system of wood-paving. In these days of high pressure almost everybody is afflicted with a consciousness that he has nerves; and never more so than when a couple of omnibuses happen to be in the same (wood-paved) street with him. Conversation in a cab is very nearly impossible; and if carried on probably results in relaxed sore throats to the conversationalists; while I have often wondered that we do not more often hear of assaults on the part of timid shop-keepers upon the apparently distraught persons who rush into shops and frantically shriek an unintelligible request for some quite ordinary commodity—a green and yellow necktie it may be, or a red parasol. I am quite sure that the Registrar-General will find that, after a few years of wood-pavements, the average expectation of life will be materially reduced in Sydney. The shrieking of trams and the civilities of the officials of our public gardens are already quite sufficient to keep up a condition of nervous irritation calculated to reduce our at present not exuberant vitality. We have goats, dogs, and cats and fireworks by day, and still more by night, and we shall shortly have to listen to the sorrowful instruments which mark the vendor of ice-creams. We have too, as I myself have reason to know, the nuisance of persons who sing in chorus upon tramcars, to which I was glad to see that a correspondent of yesterday's Herald has drawn attention. But all these are as nothing to the wood-pavements. The wood-pavements of London are almost silent; but they are said to propagate disease—being made of soft wood. Ours are of hard wood, and they propagate lunacy. I am very grateful to the Mayor for seeking to find a remedy; but I would venture to suggest that his proposed plan ought to be very carefully considered before it is adopted. An inch of sand will, no doubt, reduce the din until we get a heavy shower of rain. And then where will the sand go? Down the drains and into the harbour? I speak ignorantly, but I think I read some time ago that some parts of the harbour had already become silted to the extent of about one-half of the original depth. If we send an inch of sand into it from our wood-paved streets I doubt, like the carpenter, whether we shall get it clear, though 20 dredgers should work for half a year.

MR. JOHN OSBORNE AT GOULBURN.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

GOULBURN, FRIDAY.

Mr. John Osborne delivered a lecture in the Academy of Music to-night on the respective merits of free trade and protection. The attendance numbered about 500. Mr. Osborne received an appreciative and uninterrupted hearing, and at the close of his remarks a vote of thanks was accorded him. A motion to the effect that a policy of protection was necessary to the prosperity of this colony was carried unanimously. Mr. J. S. Hayes presided.

GUNDAGAI PROGRESS COMMITTEE.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

GUNDAGAI, FRIDAY.

A meeting of the Gundagai Progress Committee was held last night, Mr. W. Bibe being in the chair. It was declared that as the Government had not seen its way clear to abolish the differential railway rates, the progress committee should ask that, in order to protect the business interests of the town, some concession be granted to the people of Gundagai. The chairman, who is one of the leading storekeepers here, read a paper on the subject, pointing out the great loss of trade that legitimately belonged to Gundagai, and the extra haulage of goods consigned to Tumut and Adelong by being sent to Wagga instead of to Gundagai. He also instanced the greater length of road which the Government have to keep in repair, the distance being from 50 to 70 miles instead of 20 miles, which would be the case if goods were carried from here. The committee have obtained the opinion of a mining expert to strengthen the hands of the member for the district, Mr. J. H. Want, in securing a portion of the prospecting vote. The opinion is to the effect that no district in the colony was more entitled than this to a portion of the vote. It was decided to take action with the view of having a School Board appointed.

MASONIC INSTALLATION AT GUNDAGAI.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

GUNDAGAI, FRIDAY.

The masonic installation of the W.M. and officers of the Loyalty Lodge, 2073, E.C., Gundagai, took place to-day, when the following officers were duly installed:—W.M., Bro. Croker; S.W., Bro. Weekes; J.W., Bro. Matthews; S.D., Bro. M'Cabe; J. D., Bro. Bowdith; I.G., Bro. Somerville; Tyler, Bro. Dunlop. The officers and visitors from the adjoining lodges were entertained at luncheon, when the usual loyal and Masonic toasts were duly honoured. During the short time the lodge has been in existence it has made rapid progress, and is now established with a promising future.

PLOUGHING MATCH AT MERILLA.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

GOULBURN, FRIDAY.

The sixth annual ploughing match of the Merilla, Mummell, and Parkesbourne Farmers' Association took place to-day at Merilla, and was attended by 500 or 600 people, including many from Goulburn. The competition was good, and the day's proceedings were successful. The judges were Mr. C. R. Styles, of Bungonia; Mr. Jas. Stewart, of Harefield; and Mr. Vernal Hobly, of Gullen. They adopted the point system. The following are the results:—

Champion Match: First prize, £10 and cup; second, £5.—J. Nosworth, Merilla, 108 points, 1; J. Cole, Maxton, 104 points, 2. Three others competed.

First-class Match: First prize, £7 and trophy; second, £5; third, £3.—J. Hockey, Merilla, and Charles Clarke, Merilla, tied for first place, with 87 points each; G. Bool, Merilla, 85 points, 3. There was one other competitor.

Youths' Match, under 18: First prize, £3 and scarifier; second, £2.—H. Weatherstone, Parkesbourne, 80 points, 1; W. S. Headland, Parkesbourne, 70 points, 2. Three others competed, but were disqualified for having an uneven number of furrows.

There was also a double furrow match, in which all who competed, four in number, were disqualified for having an uneven number of furrows.

SUNDAY CLOSING OF PUBLIC-HOUSES.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

SIR,—Your correspondent, who signs himself "Practical," seems to have a very elastic conscience. His ideas of morality, if widely spread, would make society a sad conglomeration of systematic law-evaders. He seems to be a genuine son of Eve, for he enjoys forbidden fruit to his heart's content. He ought to be, by his own account of himself, above the temptation to defy the law by having surreptitious drinks, when he is unable to afford poultry for his Sunday's dinner, and talks of being compelled to put up with a leg of mutton instead; and what a sweet-tempered man he must be to obtain his drinks out of spite, because the law forbids the publican to open his doors on a Sunday. He is one who would compel the publican to evade the law, and yet he claims to be an intelligent and an educated man; but what can his education be worth if its only effect is to lead him to boast of breaking the laws of his country? Again, what has Sunday trading to do with his wanting drink at the theatre? Does he want to get his liquor at the Sunday theatres as well as on a week day. I am, &c.,

September 29. JUSTICE.

Any reservist who is sufficiently skilled in the use of the bicycle will, on his application (writes the Paris correspondent of the Daily News), be exempted from ordinary camp service and its hardships, to be used as a military messenger. The application should be made through the mayor of his commune to the sub-prefect, and by him sent on to the proper military district commander. It will be the mayor's business to ascertain whether the applicant is in the habit of riding a bicycle and is skilled in its management. This new rule is already creating a great demand for bicycles.

REVIEWS.

Stirrup Jingles from the Bush and the Turf, by KENNETH MACKAY. Edwards, Dunlop, and Co., Sydney, Brisbane, and London. 1887.

It is not too much to say, after reading Mr. Mackay's rhymes of bush and turf, that we have one who gives promise of being rightly called a "poet-rider." Mr. Mackay is well known upon the turf as a good unprofessional rider, and when he chooses riding as his theme, he has a right to a fair hearing. But it is not upon this claim alone that Mr. Mackay is entitled to an audience. He has the real poetic touch as well. His verses are just what they profess to be, bits of music and incident born of the life which they seek to portray. This is the principal merit of the little red-paper-covered volume that has gone out to the unpoetical public at this racing time. There would naturally be a suspicion that these turf and bush rhymes are fashioned after Gordon, and whoever writes on these themes must be open to the accusation of having caught inspiration from the author of "How we beat the favourite." Certainly it would require some extraordinary originality in the aspiring poet to convince the unbelieving. This Mr. Mackay has not, and he is modest enough and keen enough to see it. He frankly acknowledges having been saturated with Gordon's singing, and with perhaps having unconsciously fashioned his lines after his brilliant prototype. He dedicates his verses to the memory of Gordon, and does it in a manly and honest way. The lines, in fact, of the dedication are among the best, if not the best, in the volume. Here are some of them:—

"Yet, generous-hearted friend and gallant rider,
I feel that could you come from other lands,
This tribute from an all-unknown outsider
At least would fall in sympathetic hands:
For you would know that I have heard the rattle
Of timber struck by quickly-tiring feet,
That dear to me are scenes where horses battle
On swards resounding to their swift hoofs' beat.

That I have strayed through sombre forests lonely,
And lived the life so dimly here portrayed,
And that, although a feeble climber only,
I trod the pathway by my muse essayed.
While if about my lines there may be clinging
Some shreds of fancy brighter than my own,
They have been caught through listening to your singing,
And have amidst my duller dreamings grown.

So, Gordon, on your ashes I am leaving
These aimless rhymes of bush, and mine, and race,
Doubting, in truth, if their crude, clumsy weaving
May be quite worthy of such hallowed place.
Still, as they are the best that I can proffer,
I place them o'er the dust from whence they grew—
Well knowing that, in spite of foe and scoffer,
They would have found a kindly friend in you."

The first poem in the book deals with the Grand National Steeplechase Meeting at Randwick in June, 1887. There is not accumulating incident enough in the poem to make it exciting. It is rather a very clever bit of verse descriptive of horse-racing, with some moralising thrown in. For those who take an interest in the turf the book ought to have a peculiar interest. There is another poem at the end of the book called "The Old Jockey and his Mount," which has the same spirit and "go" in the lines, though the subject is a trifle pathetic. There are some good touches in the following:—

"But why should we talk of the days that are past,
Of the races we won or lost?
Both our dies from the box forever are cast,
And aside we have both been tossed.

'Tis time that we went, for Lone Hand is away,
By baskers and fielders unknown.
How they petted and cheered him that glorious day
When he carried the top-weight "home!"

Great Sussex no more may Tom Corrigan bear
To the front in spite of his load,
The strongest and swiftest to do and to dare
That ever man handled or rode.

Old Student now sleeps on the field where he fell,
Running game and true in the van;
While brave Kangaroo takes an unending spell
Not far from the brown beaten "tan."

Never more may M'Leod recover his seat
Amid shouts of wonder and fear;
While loud must, alas! be the thunder of feet
That the gallant Jack Cray can hear.

All the friends of our youth have finished the "course,"
While a sterner than Ashworth waits,
Till again on your back I will ride, old horse,
Through the endless paddock gates."

The bush rhymes in the book are as good, if not better, than the racing bits; notably "The Muster" and "Skeleton Creek," both of which have been published in the Sydney Mail. They are well-builded, and have a warm and quick fancy that is Mr. Mackay's chief characteristic. Given rigid discipline in those things which go to make up good poetry—proportion, shapeliness, purpose, completeness, and design—the hand that made "Stirrup Jingles" would make something much better. The high poetic altitude cannot be reached at a bound, and the young poet-rider has much to learn, but he is neither commonplace nor wanting in qualities that go to make up the good artist.

SCHOOL BOOKS.

We have received from Messrs. Macmillan and Co. a volume of their classical series, entitled The Last Two Kings of Macedon, being extracts from the fourth and fifth decades of Livy, edited by F. H. Rawlins, M.A. Though we see no very good reason for seeking to teach schoolboys, among the other more important portions of Roman history, the history of Macedonia between 201 and 167 B.C. out of a Latin text instead of an English one, this volume of extracts appears to be carefully edited. We think, however, that many of the notes, especially those on syntax, might very well have been left out—a remark which applies to most of the volumes of this series. It is surely not presumed that the pupil will begin this or similar books before having, through the elementary series, acquired some knowledge of the syntax; and something should be left for the lad to find out for himself—some opportunity should be given him to apply the knowledge he has previously acquired. It can hardly be necessary that in works like this more than twice as much space should be given to the notes as to the text. It would seem as if the schoolmasters were supposed to be all forgetting their Latin. As for the derivations that are so lavishly given, is not the schoolboy supposed to possess a good Latin dictionary?

We have also received from Messrs. Macmillan two volumes of their series of elementary classics, viz., Selections from Cornelius Nepos, and the Fourth Book of Cæsar's Gallic War. "The Nepos" is not an unsuitable book for beginners, and the editor has acted sensibly in (to use his own words) not adding many notes, "as I have found that young boys are apt to use them with but little profit." There are, however, two or three obscure passages left without comment, on which he might have commented with advantage. As for the "Fourth Book of Cæsar," it is of ill-fame with schoolboys, as containing the description of the bridge built by Cæsar across the Rhine. On looking the passage up in this edition, we find that the editor has here hardly given enough help to beginners, who, in other places, are apt (to use Dr. Johnson's phrase) to be encumbered with help. The difficulties are far more clearly explained in Moberly's edition, and his plan of the bridge appears to us more correct than Mr. Bryans's.

We have also to acknowledge a volume of selections from Schiller in Macmillan's Foreign School Classics. The notes are in the main judicious, and of real use for the comprehension of the author's meaning. The editors are, however, somewhat too ambitious, and indulge overmuch in references to poets and prosewriters, ancient and modern, which, though no doubt they show a good range of reading on the part of those gentlemen, might better have been omitted. They considered it, so the preface states, their duty not to lose any opportunity of stimulating a taste for poetical criticism and comparison. So the student who wishes to gain some knowledge of Schiller's lyric poetry has also to take down his Greek and Latin dictionary (if, indeed, he possesses such works, for they profess "to take their standard from the less cultured of their readers"), and try to make out the meaning of quotations from Homer, Æschylus, Sophocles, Horace, Valerius Maximus, Ovid, Virgil, relief being occasionally afforded in the way of quotations in the vernacular from General Gordon, Fenimore Cooper, Tom Campbell, Wendell Holmes, Swinburne, and a vast number of other worthies. Would it not be better if the editors would publish some original works, which they might load with quotations after the manner of the divines of the 17th century?

The translation by J. E. C. Welldon, M.A., of Aristotle's Rhetoric which we have received from Messrs. Macmillan, is an excellent piece of work. The translater thinks it very desirable that, as the majority of men have now little leisure for the study of Greek thought in the Greek language, competent interpreters should enable them to do so in their own tongue. He is further of opinion that the general neglect of the study of rhetoric is a real and great loss, and would probably, therefore, insist on its being made a compulsory subject at universities, especially for men who intended to become members of Parliament. In such a case, Aristotle, like Euclid, might well be studied in English, and not in the original Greek—pure science, as De Quincey said, admitting of adequate translation. Mr. Welldon acknowledges his great obligations to the commentary on Aristotle's Rhetoric by that eminent scholar, the late Mr. Cope. As far as we have compared his translation with the original, he has exercised a sound judgment among the matters in the rejection of interpolations in the Greek text, and in inserting in his English version words or passages necessary for the proper comprehension of his author's meaning. His style is clear, and generally neat, though occasionally very heavy. There are, indeed, several passages where he does not appear to us to have brought out the true meaning. But, on the whole, we think he has done his work very ably, and strongly recommend the translation to English readers who may wish to know how the art of rhetoric was treated by the great philosopher who raised that subject to an art, and who has left so little for others to do in this respect after him. Though, indeed, there are many who, as they despise the art of logic, equally despise that of rhetoric, and are of the opinion of Faust, that (to quote Anster's translation):—

"If feeling does not prompt, in vain you strive;
If from the soul the language does not come
By its own impulse, to impel the hearts
Of hearers with communicated power,
In vain you strive."

We have also to acknowledge the receipt of a handbook of Greek composition, by Henry Browne, S.J., published by Browne and Nolan, of Dublin, as well as a small volume of First Greek Exercises, by the same author. These are doubtless useful little books, but have nothing to distinguish them specially from many others of the same kind.

We have received from Messrs. Macmillan a Text-Book of Euclid's Elements, containing Books I. and II., by H. S. Hall, M.A., and F. H. Stevens, M.A. The editors properly claim it as a merit, that they have introduced no symbols or contractions of any kind in the working out of Book I.; but first introduce them in a mild form in Book II. In subsequent books they purpose to "employ all such signs and abbreviations as they believe to add to the clearness of the reasoning."

We have likewise received from the last-mentioned publishers a treatise on Spherical Trigonometry, part II., by Messrs. M'Clelland and Preston. This second part consists largely of the application of spherical trigonometry to spherical geometery, which latter subject the authors of this treatise hope to rescue from the comparative neglect into which it has fallen. In the part which deals peculiarly with spherical trigonometry, the subject of areas is very fully treated, some novelty being introduced in the form of a geometrical representation of the spherical excess; there is also an entire chapter devoted to the properties of the chordal triangle.

We have to acknowledge from the Religious Tract Society a Treatise on Electricity and Its Uses, by J. Munro. A main object of this work is to explain the recent applications of electricity; and the telephone and microphone, the photophone, the telephotograph, and the electric light are treated of.

From Messrs. Whitaker and Co. we have received a volume on the Conversion of Heat into Work, by William Anderson, M.I.C.E. The author informs us that his work is in substance a reproduction of a course of lectures which he delivered for the council of the Society of Arts and Manufactures, the object of the lectures being "to popularise the doctrine that in heat-engines the work given out is due to the conversion of the molecular motion of heat into the visible motion which it was desired to produce."

CAPTAIN ARTHUR PHILLIP, R.N.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

SIR,—Mr. R. B. Smith has placed a motion before the Legislative Assembly to erect a monument to Governor Phillip. A short time ago I suggested, through your columns, that such an act at the Centenary was due to the memory of the able chief who led the first fleet across the seas to these shores. Sir Henry Parkes, in his excellent proposal to call the principal apartment in the State House "Phillip Hall," has partly met the duty of recognising the services of Captain Phillip. Mr. Smith's resolution, however, should still be carried into effect, and in support thereof I would like to further direct public attention to the merits of our pioneer Governor.

When the British Government determined to form a settlement in New Holland the selection of a suitable leader was a matter for extreme care. Happily the choice rested on Captain Arthur Phillip. He was a native of London. At 16 he entered the navy and fought at the taking of Havannah, and was soon after made a lieutenant. When the seven years' war ended he returned to England, married, and settled in the New Forest. After a short period a war broke out between Spain and Portugal, and Phillip offered his services to the latter. His active and daring spirit made him peculiarly acceptable, and he was retained in the service until 1778, when arose another war between France and England, and he returned home. In 1779 he was appointed commander of the Basilisk fire ship, and two years after captain of the Ariadne. Later he commanded the Europe, of 64 guns. He was a fine specimen of the British seaman of the latter part of the last century. It was a generation in which some of our greatest naval heroes were produced. Phillip won the confidence and esteem of both the Government he served and those whom he commanded. After returning from New South Wales he was created a vice-admiral.

Certainly in the history of the world few expeditions than that led by Phillip have ever started with more difficult or dangerous contingencies as possible. Not many would have faced the responsibility. The isolation of this land, its immense distance from England, and its almost unknown character, threw quite an air of romance over the departure of the fleet. This was infinitely more the "dark continent" than Africa has been for many ages. The personnel of the fleet was a peculiar difficulty. There is some analogy between our early history and that of ancient and glorious Rome. Romulus had to deal with the thieves and ruffians he had attracted to him; and Phillip, likewise, had to manage a number of reckless and untamed spirits. The prospect of mutiny was considerable. Had there not been great care and foresight in the arrangements, the expedition might have signally failed.

Phillip, on his arrival at Botany, after a tedious voyage of over eight months, at once showed his administrative capacity. He thought the bay did not agree with the account given by Captain Cook. Instead of forming the settlement there, as he was expected by the British Government to do, he determined to explore and look elsewhere. He left Botany Bay in an open boat, and pulled northward. He entered Port Jackson, and was rewarded by discovering our never-to-be-enough-admired harbour. He chose the site of our city and gave it the euphonious name it bears. Supposing he had adhered to the Botany site, what would have been the consequence? Would not this city have been thrown back at least a generation? What service of equal value has ever been rendered to this city? This change of site was a master-stroke of policy, and for itself alone deserves special recognition.

As to his Government, it was marked by prudence and energy. Writers of our early history speak of his zeal, perseverance, and benevolence. He rewarded the industrious and virtuous, but was firm in the repression of vice. Once he was speared by an aboriginal, but recovered. When the colony was short of food, through the wreck of a storeship, and starvation seemed probable, he overruled a proposal to abandon the place, and, like a true hero as he was, lived on less than half the rations then allowed. He lived "on the same ration as the meanest convict in the territory," until relief came. Of his explorations and other incidents of his rule, it is not necessary to enter upon. Whether he delivered the speech or not attributed to him by Flanagan, there can be no doubt that he had qualities which made him in several respects great, and enabled him to render services of untold value in laying the foundation of the infant State.

We should not leave to future generations only the acknowledgment of his merit. It would, I venture to say, be a just and honourable recognition if, on Anniversary Day, 1888, the foundation of some statue of him were laid. The nearer the spot the more appropriate would it be where on that day 100 years before, in the dense bush, he commenced this city. The cost need not exceed that of a year's salary of a present Governor.

Our heroes have been so few that we can ill afford to allow the recollection of a brave pioneer like Arthur Phillip to lie even in partial oblivion. There are actions of his that would adorn the annals of any nation. It has been said that good deeds rest in the memory of age green and sunny. They must, however, be made to stand forth. How can their glory and beauty incite men to patriotism and duty if they are obscured? Arthur Phillip's services demand at our Centenary full acknowledgment, especially at the hands of this great city of Sydney, of which he was the founder.

I am, &c.,
Redfern, September 20. F. B. BOYCE.

What Truth calls "the butcher's bill" for the Burmah campaign has been received from Simla. The British army has lost from disease and in action 55 officers dead, 54 wounded, 125 invalided. Soldiers: 634 dead, 111 wounded, and 1392 invalided. Natives of all ranks: 1004 dead, 335 wounded, and 2594 invalided.

LECTURES.

THE LAWS OF COOLING, AND HOW COLD MAY BE PRODUCED ARTIFICIALLY.

A lecture upon "The Laws of Cooling, and how Cold may be Produced Artificially," was delivered in the Technical Hall, Pitt-street, on Thursday evening, by Mr. John L. Bruce, I.A. In his preliminary remarks Mr. Bruce pointed out that "cold" was merely a relative term applied to a particular degree of heat, and that the laws of cooling were neither more nor less than laws of heating. Heating consisted in raising the temperature of our surroundings; and so also cooling consisted in the lowering of the temperature of these surroundings. He then explained by means of a diagram how the change of heat really took place. He dwelt at considerable length upon the subject of evaporation, and explained that the greater the evaporation the greater the cooling effect would be. The effect of expansion and contraction was explained; and it was contended by the lecturer that there was really no such thing as cold existing as really apart from heat. The sensational phenomena and the effect produced by evaporation in connection with the absorption of heat were fully explained, and the lecturer pointed out that unless the relative properties of heat and cold were understood, a clear idea of the laws which governed cooling could not be obtained. He spent some time in the second portion of his lecture in explaining the phenomena of latent heat, and the means to be employed for the production of cold on a large scale. He described how cold could be attained by simple means, and pointed out that in ordinary circumstances it was well worth trying for. In conclusion, he referred to some of the processes employed for the purpose of keeping dairies cool. One efficient, simple, and expedient means was that of using a damp cloth in hot weather. Another means employed was that of covering the dairy roof with turf. This was a most ingenious idea, and combined within itself the obstruction of heat by an excellent non-conducter, and the abstraction of heat by an excellent evaporator. From experiments made on grass, bare earth, and water by the Government Astronomer, it was found that the evaporation during the year from grass was 20 per cent. greater than that from bare earth, and only 14 per cent. less than from water itself; but when the grass was moist on the surface the evaporation was considerably in excess of that from water, and so the cooling effect produced was correspondingly great. The mere conducting power could be best shown by the given temperatures. At a certain depth below the surface the temperature never varied throughout the year, but remained at the mean annual temperature of the locality. The depth was least at the tropics, and increased as the difference of summer and winter temperature enlarged. In the tropics the depth was about 2ft., in England it was about 30ft., and here from tests made at the Observatory it was probably between 20 and 30ft. from the surface. The value of underground cellars for preserving equal temperatures was illustrated. Freezing mixtures were explained, and the methods of ice-making and cooling were described, as well as some of the machines which are employed. The lecture, which was of an instructive character throughout, was fully appreciated by the audience. The subject of the next lecture will be "Pure Air and the General Principles of Ventilation."

SEMI-TROPICAL PRODUCTS OF NEW SOUTH WALES.

The Technical College lecture on Wednesday evening was on "Our Semi-tropical Products," by the instructor for agriculture. Tobacco was the first product dealt with, but Mr. Mackay announced that sugar, its growth and manufacture from the cane, beet, sorghum, maize, &c., arrowroot, farming oil, and fibre plants, &c., are all to come into the series. There were several special reasons for dealing with tobacco at this time. The season was just commencing, and were the process he recommended followed, there was every certainty that should 100 from that audience sow tobacco seed, 90 of them would get leaf of some sort. Then it would be found that the quality depended so largely upon the soil that that feature would be no longer overlooked. As a measure for crops like tobacco he desired to attract attention to seaweed, which was a nuisance in parts of the colony. Then, it might have been noticed in a recent issue of the Sydney Morning Herald that the London Chamber of Commerce was offering a prize of 50 guineas for the best tobacco from India or the colonies. That prize might be won here, for they could see that tobacco of very first-quality was amongst our products, and also that some he stuff offered for sale was as bad as bad could be. Mackay then showed leaf tobacco from various parts of the colony, from the United States, Cuba, &c., giving descriptions of each, and what analyses showed the contents to be. This part of the lecture was very interesting to producers of tobacco and to users of it alike. The crop, he explained, was a very old one in Australia, the climate of which was specially adapted for bringing it to the highest perfection. The reports of the first settlers were that "tobacco grews anywhere, like a weed." That description was equally correct now, but the stuff produced on unsuitable soil was miserably poor. It was by allowing this sort of tobacco to come to market that colonial leaf had got a bad name. The plant was indigenous to the country, several native tobaccos being known; but as a crop tobacco was of the most exhausting character. The material required in excess was potash. Where the soil was deficient in that the plant would grow, but the leaf was thin, brittle, poor, and had no life or body in it. Potash was a scarce commodity in our soils generally, though heavy supplies of it could be got from seaweed. Quite likely there was enough fertiliser for tobacco in the seaweed described as a nuisance in Sydney harbour, to grow the 2,000,000lb. of leaf that are necessary for the demands of this colony alone. In every part of the world where first-class leaf was produced new-days special fertilisers were needed, and were used. It paid to use them. As we worked more generally into a similar system the colony should be exporting leaf. The curing, too, required skill, and such appliances in the way of buildings as enabled the curing of the leaf to be done in proper houses, plans of which were shown and described. Otherwise the risks of loss and injury were too great. In fact, tobacco farming required skill and capital, and when they were applied the business prospects were much more safe and profitable than when all reliance was placed on the soil and climate as we found them. In his next lecture on the subject he would go more fully into the analyses of leaf, tobacco, and nicotine, the active principle of the series. The audience was large and appreciative.

The Rev. Robert Collie, F.L.S., delivered a lecture in the Glebe Presbyterian Church, on Thursday, on "The Holy Land." The Rev. Andrew Gardiner occupied the chair, and the meeting was opened by the Rev. G. K. Stewell, who has recently arrived from New Zealand. Mr. Collie described many of the famed and hallowed places in the land of Palestine. He was greatly aided in his descriptions by a series of views exhibited by Mr. Percy Hordern. At the close, on the motion of Mr. Joseph Knox, seconded by Mr. W. Wilson, a hearty vote of thanks was accorded to Mr. Collie for his lecture.

FAIR TRADE ASSOCIATION AT NEWCASTLE.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]
(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

NEWCASTLE, FRIDAY.

A very large meeting was held to-night in the Victoria Theatre, to form a Fair Trade Association. The chair was taken by Mr. W. B. Sharp, manager of the Great Northern Wool Dumping Company. Apologies for non-attendance were read from Messrs. Garvan, Traill, and others. The chairman stated that he was a thorough protectionist, or else he would not have taken the chair. Alderman W. Grahame moved the first resolution, as follows:—"That in the opinion of this meeting, the future fiscal policy of this colony should be of such a character as would give encouragement to colonial industries." Mr. W. Davies, examiner' chairman, seconded the resolution. Mr. James Fletcher, M.L.A., supported the resolution, and was received with great cheering. He maintained that trades unions were not the cause of the depression and low wages, but were the cause of benefit both to capitalists and workmen. He explained that fair trade implied that the same amount of protection should be allowed to this colony in importing as is allowed in other colonies. He maintained that with regard to the foreign coal trade, it would soon fade away. Other countries were developing their own coal industries, and it would be necessary to open up industries to consume the coal of this colony, and also to establish a colonial and intercolonial coal trade to keep the coal industry in a flourishing state. He spoke for nearly an hour, and was frequently applauded and loudly cheered at the close. In answer to a question as to why he dismissed Daniel Rees, chairman of the Miners' Union, from the Co-operative Colliery, he replied that it

COLONIAL GOVERNMENT SECURITIES.

| New S. Wales Funded | 102 | — | Debentures due 1903 | 104 | — |

Monday next having been proclaimed a public holiday in the county of Cumberland, the Exchange will be closed, and monetary and commercial business generally will be suspended.

The Sydney Underwriters' Association opened their new offices in Hamilton-street to-day. The managers of nearly all the insurance companies lunched together under the presidency of Mr. P. J. Clark. The toast, "Prosperity to the Association," was duly honoured, and the chairman in a brief speech touched upon the leading incidents in its history, and of the prospects of increasing usefulness which the insurance business presented.

A meeting was held to-day, at the wool stores of Messrs. J. H. Geddes and Co., the Hon. G. H. Cox in the chair, to take into consideration a proposal to form the Wolseley sheep-shearing machine business into a company. The necessary shares having been applied for, the company was declared formed. The officers of the company were provisionally appointed, and Mr. F. Y. Wolseley appointed to become managing director.

The fourth annual meeting of the shareholders of the Cumberland Building, Land, and Investment Company, Limited, was held in the Masonic Hall, Parramatta, yesterday evening, Mr. G. Coates, sen., presiding. The report showed a net profit of £1801 18s. 11d. for the year, which was proposed to be appropriated as follows:—£1530 7s. 1d. to be divided amongst the shareholders, £250 to be placed to the credit of the reserve fund, and the balance to be carried forward. Messrs. W. H. Wesley and N. Harper were elected directors, and Messrs. G. Coates, jun., and T. Barnett, auditors. The usual votes of thanks were accorded at the close of the meeting, and a special vote was passed to Mr. Herbert Coates, one of the retiring directors, and who had occupied a seat on the board since the formation of the company.

In our advertising columns appears the prospectus of the Broadwater Park Poultry and Dairy Company, which is being formed with a capital of £20,000 in 20,000 shares of £1 each, to buy up an existing company's interest in the Broadwater Park Dairy Farm, near Brisbane. Other information will be supplied by Mr. H. Chapman, 143, King-street.

In the import markets to-day business was quiet, the week, month, and quarter having, in fact, been periods of comparative depression. The general indebtedness of the commercial community, the state of the roads, and the proposed removal of the ad valorem and specific duties next month, have all contributed to the stagnation. It is hoped that when the freer policy comes into operation to-morrow, buyers who have been holding off will operate with greater activity, and under the influence of the warm weather the roads will speedily dry up. The receipt of the proceeds of the wool clip and of the crops to be harvested within the next quarter should have the effect of reducing where it does not entirely liquidate debt. Thus the outlook is encouraging, and trade may be expected to improve to some extent. But there is nothing in the position to warrant anything more than the most cautious buying, or to justify any marked extension of credit. Experience has shown merchants that business has been overdone in the past by the too easy terms on which goods have been supplied, a practice which has largely contributed to the present unsatisfactory state of affairs. And on all hands we hear of a disposition to curtail credit within more reasonable bounds. The competition which some time back caused the leading soft goods firms to concede practically five months' credit by allowing goods to be bought in one month and paid by four months bills from the 4th of the next month, helped to embarrass the position of the numerous country storekeepers who have lately failed. The concession has been disallowed and the previous practice resumed. Four months' credit is sufficiently long, and the relations of traders would be more satisfactory if the credit periods were still further shortened. In this connection it may be hoped that the Bankruptcy Bill will have a salutary influence in checking the career of a class of traders who often begin with nothing, and, after months or years, end with nothing, having in the meantime recklessly squandered nearly all the goods which their creditors have trusted them with. There is a very general opinion that the provision of the new bill which fixes 5s. in the £ as the sum to which a trader may reduce his assets without disentitling him to a certificate is too liberal; and it is variously thought that from 6s. 8d. to 10s. in the £ would be more satisfactory, as it would compel him to scrutinise his position more closely, and call his creditors together before his estate was almost hopelessly squandered, as is often the case now. The value of assets would be more accurately gauged; the absurd estimates often given would not avail to secure a certificate, but would rather furnish evidence of recklessness that should disentitle to one. The opinion prevails that whatever defects there may be in the bill, in the main its provisions are such as will effect a great improvement in the existing law. As to its imperfections, it will be incumbent on commercial men promptly to suggest improvements, the Government having shown unexpected alacrity in pushing forward the bill. Referring to the ordinary course of trade to-day there was next to nothing done in breadstuffs. Flour is quoted at the following prices:—Adelaide, £9 10s. to £9 15s; South Australian country brands, £9 to £9 5s.; Victorian, £8 15s. to £9; New South Wales, £8 15s. to £10; roller made, £9 10s. to £10 10s. Commenting on the British market position, the Economist thinks that the requirements of the year will be 27,000,000 quarters of wheat, of which it was estimated that the home crop would furnish 8,000,000 quarters, and 19,000,000 quarters would be needed from foreign sources, as against about 17,000,000 quarters in the previous year. It is thought that requirements would be met at a low price, for although the American and Indian wheat crops had both turned out much less prolific than those of 1886, the crop in nearly all importing countries was so good that England would be the only large importer. Locally, a moderate inquiry noticed for tea; and small lines have been moved off. Coffee is still at last week's prices, say 12½d. for No. 1 Ceylon Plantation. The market for dried fruits exhibits no material change. Writing from Smyrna at a late date, S. J. Protopazzi gives the probable crop of sultanas at 20 per cent. less than that of last year, the drought, moreover, having caused the fruit to be shrivelled. The yield of elemes, on the other hand, is given as 28,850 tons, about 950 tons more than in the previous year. The crop of figs was likely to be 25 per cent. less than the yield of last year, and far inferior in quality. In general grocery goods there is no marked feature, all lines being quoted at late current rates. Pepper is 2d. per lb. cheaper—the amount of the duty. In brewers' goods, trade is quiet. In liquids, a fair business has been done for delivery next month. A parcel of Aitken's bulk ale placed at current rates, and inquiries indicate that the beer trade will be better next month. Wines and spirits generally are without change. In metals, there is little to notice: sheet lead, £15 7s. 6d.; fencing wire firm at the advanced rates. Galvanised iron also well held, up to £18 10s. now being asked for best brands. Oils are without change. Woolpacks are being doled out at 3s. to 3s. 1½d. In drugs an advance in the English market has strengthened values locally, and 1s. 5½d. is required in bond. Carbonate of soda is scarce, and re-sales of shipments to arrive have been made at £10 10s., and we hear of as much as £14 to £15 being asked for spot lots.

The following is a return of the Customs collections at Sydney for the period from January 1 to September 30, for the years 1886 and 1887 respectively:—

| | 1886. | 1887. |
|---|---|---|
| January | £158,903 3 3 | £155,097 6 10 |
| February | 137,364 11 5 | 153,136 10 0 |

Elsewhere we reprint the new tariff, which will come into force to-morrow (Saturday).

R. Goldsbrough and Co., Limited, have received the following cablegram, dated London, 29th September:—"There is no change in this market to report since our last cable. Larger attendance of buyers. The present series will close on the 5th of October."

English commercial files to hand to-day state that on August 26, consequent on the rumoured further withdrawal of money from the bank for the United States, and the impression that the bank authorities would very likely raise their rate of discount on an early day, there had been increased firmness in the money market, and three months' bills had been negotiated at from 2¾ to 3 per cent., or equal to the current bank rate. The supply of money being plentiful, call loans had ranged from ½ to 1 per cent., with very little demand. Closing quotations for bank stocks were:—Bank of Australasia, 101, 104; Bank of New South Wales, 66, 68; Bank of New Zealand, 22½, 23½; Commercial of Australia, 9, 10; English, Scottish, and Australian Chartered, 33, 34; London Chartered of Australia, 24½, 25½; Queensland National, Limited, 12½, 12¾; Union of Australia, 62½, 63½.

A paragraph in our shipping column shows that during the quarter ended to-day the shipping arrivals in Sydney number 410, with a registered tonnage of 377,542, against 396 vessels, of 344,787 registered tons, in the previous three months.

The P. and O. Company's R.M.S. Rome left to-day for London, via ports, with 887 bales wool, 6 bale marsupial skins, 30 bales leather, 25 bales basils, 1 case furs, 90 cases cheese, 4 cases seed, 1 package chrono meter, 2773 cases meats, 13 cases extract, 37 packages tea, 5995 ingots (200 tons 1cwt. 20lb.) tin, 914 bars lead bullion (34 tons), 1540 cakes (64 tons 10cwt. 2qr. 11lb.) copper, 8 packages oxide of iron, and 7 packages sundries.

The following was the Customs revenue received to-day:—

Spirits, £1350 17s. 3d.; wine (still), £120 6s. 6d.; wine (sparkling), £10; ale, porter, and beer (in wood), £12 10s.; ale, porter, and beer (in bottle), £15 3s. 8d.; tobacco and snuff, £203 2s.; tobacco (for manufacturing purposes only), £488 14s.; cigars, £65 10s. 8d.; cigarettes, £32 17s. 3d.; tea, £350 19s. 9d.; sugar (unrefined), £461 10s.; opium, £47 15s.; rice, £14 14s. 8d.; dried fruits, £53 12s. 6d.; nuts, £1 3s. 2d.; specific duty, £355 8s

The Sydney Morning Herald.

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1887.

To-day the ad valorem and additional specific duties come off, and the trade of the colony will be freer than it has been for many years. Not indeed since the tariff of Sir E. DEAS-THOMSON was in force have the Customs duties been less oppressive than they will be henceforth. It is perfectly true that our tariff has always been the most liberal among the tariffs of the Australian colonies, and that in consequence the colony has been more favourably treated by capitalists in the matter of loans and otherwise than any other. Nevertheless, it is also a fact that until the Parliament adopted the tariff which comes into operation to-day, the tendency even of our fiscal system has been in the direction of protection. This was due in the first place to the growth of the sugar, tobacco, kerosene, wine, and other industries, the ever-increasing local production of which has reduced the Customs revenues on these articles, giving the amount of the reduction to the local producers. The failure to watch and check this infringement on the rights of the people, by the imposition of adequate excise provisions, is responsible for a very considerable loss of revenue, and interference with the free trade of the community generally. In the second place, the original tariff of Sir E. DEAS-THOMSON has at different times been deranged by the addition of new duties of a directly protective character. No doubt their enactment was avowedly for revenue purposes. Twice ad valorem duties have so been imposed, namely, in 1865 and in 1886. It is remarkable that the great inflation of the land revenue was the cause of the discontinuance of these duties when first set up, and that to the absorption of the surplus and the decline of the current land revenue was due the imposition of the second batch of ad valorem duties.

Cavillers will no doubt say that the new tariff is not entirely a free-trade tariff—that the Government did not to the very letter carry out their professed intentions. And on looking down the list of dutiable articles, published in another column, it may be admitted that there are still there some which a rigid freetrader would disapprove of. But there is force in the reply that it is not right to destroy industries that have grown up under the operation and encouragement of the import duties. It would be hard, for instance, to justify a motion to the effect that the duty on kerosene should be abolished in three or six months—such a motion as was once proposed by Mr. DIBBS. Consideration should be shown to those who have established industries. We trust, nevertheless, that our Governments will aim steadily to limit the scope and operation of the duties which create vested rights and monopolies inimical to the interests of the community, and that at any rate their public policy will be regulated in accord with the language used by Mr. BURNS in his Budget speech: "We also hold that the moment any tax gives even what is called incidental protection it should be modified or repealed." If that course had been pursued by the successive Governments who have allowed revenue duties to become protective, the work of the Government last session would have been very much simplified. It was the industries which had grown up under the operation of the law that created the difficulty.

The colony is to be congratulated on the free tariff, especially on the ground that it was the result of an appeal to the people. The fiscal question was the test question with the constituencies. More than two-thirds of the people determined that the colony should not go on drifting in the direction of protection, and they sent to the right-about a number of candidates who made sure that the system was about to be inaugurated, with themselves as champions and leaders. Never did the country say anything more clearly than that it desired free commercial intercourse with all the world; and Sir HENRY PARKES and the members of his Government met a new Parliament with a large majority of its members pledged to abolish the ad valorem duties, as well as some other duties having a protective incidence. Whatever truth there was in the statement that protection was being "sneaked in," it is undoubtedly a fact that the people in the most open way declared that they would have none of it. If Sir HENRY PARKES and his Government, in regard to a few articles, yielded to the exigencies of a Parliamentary party, it must be said that was not the wish of the colony, which pronounced most unmistakably for free trade.

Everyone should rejoice in the inauguration of the new tariff, because it is in the interest of the colony as a whole. The great wealth-producers, those engaged in the pastoral, the agricultural, and the mining industries, who furnish almost everything which goes to keep the subsidiary industries in operation, are not and cannot be benefited by being unequally taxed to maintain the employment of other classes. If they have to pay duties ranging from 5 to 50 per cent. on the various articles required by them in the development of the country's resources, or on their food or clothing, clearly they are so far handicapped in their competition with the producers of America, or India, or any other continent. They have so much less to distribute throughout our own community. The great wealth-producers of America have long been struggling under the weight of the duties which the artisan populations of the Eastern States have been sufficiently numerous to impose. But recent news seems to show that the day of deliverance is not far off. Our graziers, and farmers, and miners have reason to be glad that they have hitherto escaped the exactions which in America have long been felt, and which in Victoria and other Australian colonies are already complained of. If the new tariff be compared with that of Victoria or New Zealand, or with that of any other colony, where ad valorem and other duties ranging from 10 to 50 per cent. are in force, every one will see how well off in this colony are those who, depending on honest unassisted labour themselves, are not called upon by State enactment to assist others in work which, until it can be done here without aid, had better be done outside.

It is remarkable that the year which frees this colony from a number of its protective duties, is a year in which nearly all the other colonies are increasing those duties. Industries established under their operation have not prospered, and heavier duties have been demanded and granted by the respective Legislatures. Another coincidence is significant—that whilst in other colonies bad times have directly promoted the protectionist system, in New South Wales a fuller measure of commercial freedom has been given under the strain of adverse circumstances. It will be interesting to watch the progress of the colonies under their diametrically opposite fiscal systems. In the intercolonial and Polynesian trade New South Wales cannot fail to have an advantage over other colonies. Although the operation of the ad valorem duties was but for a brief period, it is known to have prejudicially affected the re-export trade of Sydney, especially with Queensland. Therefore their removal must be regarded with satisfaction, and the change in policy cannot fail to enhance the commercial prestige of Sydney and Newcastle.

From a recent telegram in the Times, which we publish this morning, as well as from our St. Petersburg letter, which will be found in another column, we learn that a remarkable change is coming over the views of the Russian authorities in the matter of public education. The experience of the Russian authorities would appear to be that people refuse to be content to regard knowledge as an end only; they are disposed to make it a means of scrutinising the system under which they live, and, as it would appear, they arrive at conclusions not quite in harmony with those of the governing class. Some time ago there was a mania in Russia for spreading classical education among all classes, and M. KATKOFF, the late editor of the Moscow Gazette, will be remembered as one of those who gave an impetus to the system which is now condemned. It appears to have been believed by those who advocated the dissemination of it that an acquaintance with classical lore would have a humanising effect upon the minds of the rising generation, and that, therefore, it would be well that increased facilities should be granted to enable students to pass through the Universities. But, contrary to all expectation, Nihilism has not shown any tendency to diminish with increased mental cultivation, and the youth of to-day have no greater liking for autocratic power than those who were offered less opportunity for educational advancement. The truth, indeed, is that the students of Russian Universities have been showing quite as strong a taste for the use of dynamite as any other class of the CZAR's subjects, and it has been decided to restrict the entry into the higher schools of students whose parents are below a certain rank. The circular conveying the decision of the Ministry of Public Education is a very curious document. It begins by stating the concern which is felt by the Minister for the improvement of the class of students in the gymnasia and pro-gymnasia, and continues in these remarkable words:—"Therefore, strictly observing this principle, the gymnasia and pro-gymnasia will henceforth refuse to receive as pupils the children of domestic servants, of cooks, washerwomen, small shopkeepers, and others of the like condition, whose children, with the exception, perhaps, of those gifted with extraordinary capacities, should not be raised from the circle to which they belong, and be thereby led, as long experience has shown, to despise their parents, to become discontented with their lot, and irritated against the inevitable inequalities of existing social positions."

There is a certain grim humour about the phrase "inevitable inequalities of existing social positions;" and unless the mind of the Minister had become completely fixed in the groove of Imperialism, he must have smiled as he settled with a phrase a question which is agitating a large number of the Russian people. And yet the words which we have quoted are in themselves a singlar confession that the result of education has been to convince many that present inequalities are not wholly "inevitable," although they may be so under existing conditions. Ignorant people have hitherto been content to believe in an autocratic system; educated or partially educated people are beginning to hold very different views. The remarkable conclusion is therefore reached by the Russian authorities that education is wrong; it does not seem to occur to them to ask whether the fault may not lie with the social system under which they live. But perhaps the most striking thing about the circular is the quiet selfishness which pervades it. If anything were needed to condemn the Russian system of government, it would be the plain assumption that what by all civilised nations is debated with reference to the general interests of the people, is regarded under it as concerning the comfort of the governing class only. There is no thought whether education will have that elevating effect which elsewhere is pleaded in justification of the undertaking of it by the State. The latter, indeed, is to be little concerned with cases which require moral cultivation, but much with those who have got to the point at which the justification for State education ceases to exist. "It must be kept in view that the gymnasia and pro-gymnasia are schools which give access to the Universities and to the highest careers in the service of the State and the public, and that only children who learn well, and whose morality leaves nothing to be desired, should be educated in these establishments, so that they may produce well brought-up and well-intentioned young men of proved morality, for whom the directors may be able to answer in the future, not only before their superiors, but also, which is even more important, before their own consciences."

The clear intention of this regulation appears to be the denial of the means of education to any but those whose relatives are prepared to submit them to a political baptism, and to promise and vow that they will become from henceforth the faithful servants of autocracy, and the confessed enemies of the revolutionary party. It is true that some sort of education is to be provided for "the children of domestic servants, cooks, washerwomen, small shopkeepers, and others of the like condition." To these "lower and easier schools" are to be indicated. But a provision is made enabling the directors of these schools to exclude any student whose family life is not satisfactory, and it is only too likely that a free discretion will be exercised in the use of the power which is conferred by it.

To us, with whom the point to which State education should be carried is rather a question of cost than of any other principle, it seems not a little strange to watch an arbitrary endeavour to prevent the masses of a people from acquiring anything that is deserving of the name of knowledge altogether.. And yet from the point of view of self-interest those are doubtless right who in Russia desire to keep the people in a condition of ignorance. They cannot prevent the deluge; but perhaps they can put it off so far that it shall fall on the heads of another generation of rulers. They value a kind of power which is beginning to be less and less valued in other countries, and in keeping the people in darkness they are taking the best means of retaining it a little longer. There is no iconoclast like knowledge where the icon is representative only of what has ceased to be right and natural; and those who have striven to maintain antiquated conditions, whether as rulers in Church or in State, have always striven to keep it from those over whom they have ruled. But if the Russian authorities are now awaking to a sense of their mistake in the past, they will not find it easy of repair. The wedge has found an entrance, if only a small one, and the blows of succeeding years will drive it home, until the whole fabric be eventually split asunder. In the meanwhile they will have to contend with the discontent which is sure to accompany the withdrawal of privileges which have once been granted, and find one more difficulty added to the maintenance of autocratic government. But if the spread of knowledge be a danger to those who rule by tyranny, it is the reverse to government founded upon freer conditions. If knowledge be iconoclastic, it is destructive only of the images which represent false principles. A moment's reflection will teach even those who deplore the over-education of the lower social classes, that in the increased intelligence of the latter lies their own truest safety. A great writer of the present day has given a brilliant illustration of this truth. "A peer of our day," he says, "knows that he is better off without defensive appliances and retainers and serfs than his predecessor was with them. His country-house is more secure than an embattled tower; he is safer among his unarmed domestics than a feudal lord was when surrounded by armed guards; he is less in danger going about weaponless than was the mail-clad knight with lance and sword."

We observe that some English papers are showing an interest in the domestic legislation of this colony. The Spectator and the Guardian have been considering Sir ALFRED STEPHEN's Divorce Extension Bill. The Spectator regards it as a "hopelessly bad measure," and hopes that the QUEEN will disallow it. The Guardian thinks that if the bill should not be disallowed, the clergy here ought to refuse to remarry divorced persons, or to allow them the rights of communion. There is no reason to object when English journalists display an interest in the affairs of the colonies. They are as free to express their opinions about our concerns as we are to express our opinions about theirs, or to say that the condemnation of this bill as "hopelessly bad" is to be accepted here as an indication that the writer is but imperfectly acquainted with the facts of the case. The reform embodied in the bill is required here as a means of relief because the law as it stands and the conditions of the community are not altogether suited to each other. As to the advice of the Guardian to the clergy, it is divided into two parts, which do not stand on the same foundation. If the clergy think it better not to remarry divorced people, they are at liberty to act on their own convictions, and to discharge their own consciences. The parties concerned will not suffer by the refusal, because their readiness to remarry would imply that they had settled the question of right or wrong in their own minds; and therefore it is to be assumed that when they find they cannot be married in one place they will go to another. The suggestion that divorced people who re-marry should be excommunicated is of a different character. Some nice questions of law might be raised if it were carried into effect. The act of excommunication is either a serious matter or a light one. People who regard it as a light one would probably, if threatened with such treatment, pay little attention to the threat; nor is it certain that all the religious bodies would make common cause in this matter. On the other hand, persons who regarded this treatment as a serious thing, and yet held that they had done nothing to deserve it, would naturally resent it. They might contend, first, that it was a wrong to deprive them of their rights for doing what the law had expressly authorised them to do, and next, that, inasmuch as they had only performed a lawful act, they were entitled to redress at the hands of any clergyman who had practically proclaimed them in public to be "open and notorious evil livers." The writer in the Guardian probably meant well, but it is to be doubted whether his advice is for the good of the people of the colony or of the Church of England in the colony. However, we have yet to learn whether the QUEEN will be advised to disallow the measure, and so to initiate another controversy upon the marriage law between the Imperial and colonial Governments. Hitherto such controversies have been ended by the Imperial authorities giving way.

The deputation which urged the MINISTER for WORKS to construct the locomotives in the private workshops in the colony dealt with a subject of great public importance. In asking that the locomotives should be so constructed in preference to importing them or making them in the Government workshops, the relative advantages of three possible courses are brought under notice. In the public interest that should be followed which will give the best results. We have insisted that material for public works should be procured in England if cheaper than in the colony, unless for the difference in price there are some countervailing advantages in local construction. In that light preference might be given to colonial work. If it be decided that on such grounds the locomotives can be constructed here, then the question to be determined is, shall they be done by workmen employed by the Government or by contract? It is contended by leading engineers that though they cannot make the locomotives so cheaply as they can be made in England they can make them more cheaply than the Government can make them. And there can scarcely be any doubt that their contention is right. It is the general opinion that the area of the operations of the Government should be contracted, and not expanded. Government is already far too large an employer of labour. Whether rightly or wrongly, it is thought that the Government "stroke" cannot be compared with the stroke in private establishments, and if it be conceded by candid engineers that they can only do work at an excess of 10 or 20 per cent. on English cost, it may be safely assumed that the same work would not be done in the Government workshops at less than an advance of from 30 to 50 per cent. It is a radically wrong principle for Government to carry out work that can be better carried out by private firms. Should the Government undertake the construction of the locomotives, it is contended that they will rob the private foundries of their best engineers, and thus place them at a disadvantage in their competition for other work. That is fair reason for complaint on public as well as on private grounds, and it serves to show how improper it is for Government to interfere unnecessarily with the labour market of the country. It may be questioned whether the Government will be justified in having the locomotives constructed in the colony at all; but if they are, there will hardly be a second opinion as to the contention that private firms should do the work.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

OUR cable news this morning announces that the recent incident on the Franco-German frontier has caused much uneasiness, and it is feared at Metz that an outbreak of hostilities between France and Germany is not far off. German Generals are reported to be actively engaged in inspecting the German fortresses on the frontier.

THE mails per P. and O. Company's steamers have been, since April 20 to September 20 (the monsoon period of the year), despatched on alternate Tuesday afternoons; but until further notice they will be closed at the General Post Office on Thursday afternoons. Correspondence for despatch by this line of steamers must be specially addressed, "Per P. and O. Company's steamer, via Brindisi."

HIS Excellency the Governor will on Monday next open the new buildings which have just been completed for the purposes of a City Night Refuge and Soup Kitchen. The necessity for increased accommodation has long been felt by those who have been engaged in the philanthropic work of providing food and shelter for the outcasts in our midst, and the committee of the institution have been often reluctantly compelled through the inadequacy of the accommodation at their disposal to turn away large numbers who have been seeking admission. The new building will, it is anticipated, prove amply sufficient for the demands made upon it. It is capable of affording sleeping accommodation to 250 persons. It contains a dining-room and two dormitories. The dormitories measure each about 75ft. by 35ft., and the dining-room is somewhat larger, about 87ft. by 35ft.—space sufficient to dine about 500 persons if necessary. After the opening ceremony on Monday the annual meeting in connection with the institution will be held, and the Premier, the Primate, and the Mayor are expected to take part in the proceedings. In the evening a concert will be held in aid of the funds of the institution, and many of the leading professional and amateur vocalists will give their services on the occasion.

THE Premier (Sir HENRY PARKES) received several deputations yesterday. He promised to bring the request of the Mayor and city aldermen, to hand over to the corporation the site occupied by the Central Police Offices, under the notice of his colleagues. Favourable consideration was also promised to the request of the Botany dairymen, who complained of the action of the police in destroying their wells of water without giving them sufficient time to obtain any other supply; to the Randwick people, who want extra police protection; and to the Metropolitan Horticultural Society, who consider that they are entitled to an annual subsidy from the Government of pound for pound of their revenue. The council of Adamstown asked for an extension of two months' time to use "unemployed" labour in their municipality on the usual conditions—that is, the Government paying half the day's wages—and the concession was granted.

THE Government has decided to appoint the following gentlemen a board to examine the competitive designs which have been sent in for the State House to be erected in the Centennial Park, and to select such of the designs as in their judgment merit the two prizes offered, and to report generally regarding them:—Sir John Hay, President of the Legislative Council; Mr. J. S. Mitchell, Darling Point; the Hon. E. Knox, M.L.C.; Mr. Alex. Oliver, M.A.; the Right Rev. the Primate; Mr. Barnet, Colonial Architect; and Mr. George A. Mansfield, architect. In order that no suspicion of partiality might be attached to the adjudication of the board, it has been decided that no member of the Government shall have a seat upon it. With regard to the selection of the Primate, it may be stated that he has been chosen as a scholar, a man of cultivated taste, and the son of one of the most eminent architects that the century has produced—Sir Charles Barry, the architect of the Houses of Parliament at Westminster. Mr. Mansfield is one of the gentlemen nominated for a position on the board by the Institute of Architects at a recent meeting.

THE Premier received a telegram from Wentworth yesterday stating that the latest returns for the election showed the following result:—Mr. De Courcy Browne, 593; Mr. Griffin, 571—a majority of 22 for Mr. Browne. The returns from 15 polling-places had then to come in. Mr. Griffin's success the Premier regards as assured.

A NUMBER of deputations waited on the Minister for Works yesterday, and occupied his time during nearly the whole of the day. The majority of the deputations were about trivial matters, the most important being an influential one representing the principal colonial engineering firms, who wished to obtain a definite answer from the Minister with regard to the manufacture of the locomotives for which tenders were called some time ago. Mr. Sutherland informed them that the Government had not yet decided whether they would have these engines manufactured in the colony or not, and stated that the colonial prices were much higher than those from abroad. Another deputation, representing the Deniliquin Railway League, advocated the claims of that district for the continuation of the railway line from Jerilderie to Deniliquin, and representatives of the Bega district also urged on the Minister the necessity for the continuation of the coast line of railway to that place.

THE Minister for Mines made an important statement yesterday, in reply to a deputation from the Newcastle district regarding the provisions of the new Coalfields Regulations Act which will shortly be introduced into the Legislative Assembly. The deputation made some recommendations which they desired to see incorporated in the new bill, but Mr. Abigail stated that he could not embody them in the measure, because they would jeopardise the passing of it. With regard to mining under streets and roads, the Minister said the fullest powers would be given to municipalities to protect the streets and roads in their respective areas. He did not claim for the measure that it was perfect, but it would be found that in the framing of it an endeavour had been made to protect lives and property, and care had been taken at the same time to do nothing tyrannical or unnecessarily harsh against those who had to employ labour. The Government desired to pass a reasonable measure, one under which people could profitably invest their money in the development of mines, and one under which the practical miner might with some degree of safety pursue his arduous work.

HIS Honor the Chief Justice, having disposed of the circuit business at Hay, returned to Sydney on Thursday morning, and will leave on Monday next for Young. His Honor sat yesterday in the Equity jurisdiction, and dealt with several minor matters; but one or two important applications were, by consent, adjourned till Thursday. The Chief Justice also heard an application in divorce. Mr. Justice Innes, who has returned from Wagga Wagga, sat all the morning in Chambers, and disposed of a number of cases set down on the list. He will leave this evening for Albury and Deniliquin.

THE funeral of Mr. Robert Pitcairn, Crown Prosecutor for the South-western District, took place yesterday afternoon at Waverley Cemetery. Amongst those who attended to pay the last tribute of respect to the deceased gentleman were his Honor Judge Forbes, Hon. G. B. Simpson, Q.C., his Honor Mr. Acting-Justice Manning; Messrs. A. C. Fraser, Under-Secretary of Justice; W. W. Stephen, secretary to the Attorney-General (the Attorney-General himself was unable to attend through pressure of official duties); P. J. Healy and W. L. Merewether, Crown Prosecutors; W. R. Beaver, Clerk of the Peace; F. E. Rogers, E. Bennett, W. H. Coffey, G. R. Campbell, F. W. Gibson, H. Manning, barristers-at-law; F. W. Garstang, F. Forbes, W. M. Macfarlane, and T. B. Walcot.

WE regret to have to announce the death of Mr. W. P. Woolcott, sen., house and land agent, which occurred suddenly yesterday afternoon. Mr. Woolcott at the time of his death was on his way from his office, Fitz-Evan-chambers, Castlereagh-street, to join his brother (the late town clerk), when he dropped dead, it is supposed from an attack of apoplexy.

THE North German Lloyd's steamer Lubeck, from Apia and Samoa, with mails, passengers, and cargo, anchored in Watson's Bay shortly before 3 o'clock this morning.

WE learn that a trial survey of the proposed Parramatta-Dural railway or tramway line will be commenced on Tuesday next. Yesterday Mr. Kennedy, one of the surveyors to be employed in the work, visited Parramatta, and, in addition to fixing the site for the main camp, drove as far as Castle Hill in company with Mr. Hugh Taylor, M.L.A., who pointed out the direction in which it has been suggested the line should be carried.

IT appears from a return laid on the table of the Legislative Assembly that the s.s. Oroya arrived on the 19th instant, having on board a small portion of the balance of nominated immigrants, consisting of one single man, one single woman, three married women coming to join their husbands, and 10 young children—10 statute adults. The cost of passage, as per special agreement made by the Agent-General, was at the rate of £15 per statute adult, towards which a total of £16 had been paid by three depositors on account of their nominees. On examination the immigrants expressed themselves well satisfied with their treatment during the voyage, and were forwarded to various destinations to their friends, who had been previously advised of their anticipated arrival.

FROM a return which has been laid on the table of the Legislative Assembly it appears that the number of sick and wounded persons received into the Sydney Hospital during the last five years from the Prospect dam works was 62, and in respect of railway, sewer, and other works during the same period 150. The number of days they remained under treatment was 4907, and the amount of money received from the contractors of these works, whether in the form of daily maintenance charge or annual subscription was £895 15s. With regard to Prince Alfred Hospital, no record of such cases is kept. At Parramatta Hospital the number of sick or wounded persons received from the Prospect dam works during the five years was 203; and in respect of railway, sewer, and other works during the same period, 13. The number of days they remained under treatment was 6541. The amount received from the contractors in the shape of maintenance was £318, and £29 is still due.

A RETURN has been laid on the table of the Legislative Assembly showing how the additional vote of £100,000 for roads has been distributed. The vote, it appears, has been divided as follows:—20 per cent. on the following, subdivided according to the amounts of individual votes:—Main roads under Department Vote for 1887, £47,490; 20 per cent. appropriated from vote of £100,000, £9498. Main roads under municipalities: Vote for 1887, £20,933; 20 per cent. appropriated from vote of £100,000. £4187. Minor roads under Department: Vote for 1887, £310,000; 20 per cent. appropriated from vote of £100,000, £62,000. Minor roads under trustees: Vote for 1887, £80,000; 20 per cent. appropriated from vote of £100,000, £6000. Totals: Vote for 1887, £408,423; 20 per cent. appropriations from vote of £100,000, £81,685. This appropriated £81,685 of the £100,000 vote, leaving a balance of £18,315, which has been distributed in accordance with the list given.

THE new time-tables for the Metropolitan Tramway system come into operation to-day. They have now been before the public for three weeks, and very few expressions of dissatisfaction have been received by the department. The new arrangement, in addition to effecting a saving to the public revenue of from £7000 to £10,000 a year, will, it is confidently anticipated, afford better travelling facilities to the public than the one that has hitherto existed. Under the new system the services of about 30 men will be dispensed with, but employment will be found for them elsewhere—some on the Newcastle and Platteburg line and others upon the railways.

MR. RICHARDS, the City Surveyor, has written to the Government, asking that the Tramway Department should stop the trams on the western side of Harris-street, to facilitate the traffic pending the wood-paving operations in George-street. No decision has yet been arrived at on the matter.

MONDAY next will be a public holiday throughout the county of Cumberland in honour of the eight-hours demonstration. The various trade societies will meet and march in procession to the Agricultural Society's grounds, Moore Park, where the day will be passed in various amusements. In addition to the means provided for spending the day at the Agricultural Society's grounds, arrangements have been made for excursions to several of the most inviting of the holiday resorts about the harbour, and special attractions will be found at places like the Zoological Gardens, Moore Park, and the Aquariums at Manly and Bondi. Particulars of what may be experienced at the various centres where those who avail themselves of the holiday may seek enjoyment will be found in our advertising columns. The following arrangements will be observed in the mail branch of the General Post-office:—The various offices of that branch will be open from 8.30 to 10 a.m. only, and the 8 a.m. delivery only will be effected by letter-carriers. The country mails usually despatched in the afternoon and evening, also the coastwise, intercolonial, and foreign mails, will close at 9 a.m. The iron pillar receivers, and receivers at suburban post-offices, will only be cleared at the first usual hour on that day.

REGARDING shipments of butter to England, we are indebted to the Fresh Food and Ice Company for some interesting particulars of an experimental shipment made recently, of which the returns are now to hand. In the first half of the year the company, being apprehensive that the supply of butter consequent upon the good season would be much in excess of the local demand, determined to send some butter to London to the care of their agents, Messrs. Mort and Co. Last June eight of Pond's enamelled boxes, each of which held half a hundredweight of butter, made at the Pioneer Factory, Kiama, were placed in the cold chamber of the Orient steamship Liguria. The principal object of shipping in June was to have the butter arrive in London in a hot season, so that the keeping quality of the product could be properly tested. The butter arrived in excellent condition, and the company have now, under date August 18, the account sales and the following comments from their agents:—"The butter ex Liguria has turned out very well, and has been fortunate enough to benefit in the rise of 10s. per cwt., which has recently taken place in consequence of the drought. The difference in price between summer and winter usually ranges from 10s. to 20s. per cwt., so that, if you elect to ship the stock you have on hand, you can count upon some 10s. over the prices now obtained, which were—2 packages, 108s.; 2, 106s.; 4, 100s. per cwt. respectively. You will observe by the account sales herein that the net landing weights show 18lb. loss. In explanation, it is asserted the wood absorbs the brine, and accounts for the deficiency of a little over 2lb. per case. Mark the packages of future shipments with letters or numbers, and do not indicate the source of supply. Circular packages, although ordinarily used, are not the best for stowage. We think you can do no better than with the excellent square boxes such as this sample came in. The first two cases, sold at 108s., contained excellent butter, as sweet and sound as possible. The cheapest line was in equally good condition, but the flavour was turnippy, indicating a different feed. Our experts are very emphatic that the butter if landed in same condition in the winter will have a splendid result. The butter is good, sound, and well made." This information should be encouraging to the dairymen, as it is evident that the butter market, which of late has been much depressed, can be considerably relieved by shipments. In London on the 15th of August the highest quotations for imported butter were—Normandy, 126s. to 132s.; Dutch, 116s. to 120s. The Fresh Food and Ice Company intend to ship regularly, and will send about two tons from this port on the 11th instant.

THE sittings of the Metropolitan Quarter Sessions will commence at Darlinghurst on Monday morning, before Mr. District Court Judge Murray. Seventy-six cases have been set down for hearing, and 270 witnesses have been notified to be in attendance. The Court will be opened, as a matter of form, at 10 o'clock, but no cases will be heard in consequence of Monday having been declared a public holiday. The pleas of the prisoners who are now in gaol will be taken, but no jurors will be required until Tuesday morning; and we have been requested to state that no witnesses need attend until their cases are notified for trial each day in the newspapers. Elsewhere will be found a list of the cases.

THE Articled Clerks' Association held their sixth general meeting at the Supreme Court, on Thursday evening. Mr. W. E. Clapin having been voted to the chair, it was announced that the smoke concert held on the 22nd ultimo had proved a financial success, inasmuch as by it £15 had been added to the library fund; and a further announcement that Mr. Nash had given £4 4s., Mr. Alex. Gordon, jun., £2 2s., and Messrs. H. E. Cohen and Digby £1 1s. to the same fund, was received with applause. Mr. J. F. Thomas opened a discussion with regard to the Acts referring to bills of sale. Messrs. Hale, Martyn, Howarth, and M'Kellar also took part in the discussion, which having been concluded, it was unanimously decided that the said Acts should be amended. The meeting terminated with a vote of thanks to the chairman.

YESTERDAY evening a public meeting of the ratepayers of North Willoughby was held at the School of Arts, Mowbray-road, for the purpose of considering the action which had recently been taken by two gentlemen to obtain a special audit of the accounts of the borough. The chair was occupied by Mr. F. Treatt, and the Mayor of the borough, several aldermen, and about 50 ratepayers were present. A good deal of talking took place, but beyond this no definite results were attained by the meeting, a resolution recommending the council to vote the sum of £50 for the examination of the council's books by a public accountant, and an amendment in favour of a special audit, being both lost when put to the meeting.

ON Thursday evening last, an adjourned meeting of the various friendly societies interested in the proposed church parade, in aid of local charities, was held in the Friendly Societies' Hall. Mr. T. M. Shepherd was voted to the chair. Letters were received from Archdeacon Gunther and the Rev. J. D. Murray consenting to hold services in their respective churches on the date fixed for the parade. A number of preliminaries were arranged, and the meeting then adjourned for a fortnight.

A MEETING of the Birchgrove Literary and Debating Society was held in St. John's Schoolhouse, Balmain North, on Wednesday evening. Mr. W. C. Ward (president) occupied the chair. Several new members were elected, and others nominated. The evening was devoted to a mock municipal election, six candidates addressing the meeting.

THE Woollahra Literary and Debating Society held its weekly meeting on Wednesday evening last, in the Oddfellows' Hall, Queen-street; Mr. M. Shaw in the chair. The business of the day was reading from the manuscript journal the following papers:—Editorial, by the editor; "Men of the Time as seen through the Camera of our Society," by Geebung; "The Prevalence of Fraud and Dishonesty," by Sextus; "Brevities," by a Vagabond; "Every Man has his Price," by Demos. The papers were each criticised at length, and at the usual closing time it was announced by the editor that all the papers he had received had not been read. These were deferred till next journal night, and the meeting terminated, the members having spent a very pleasant and instructive evening.

A MEETING of licensed drivers was held at the Temperance Hall last evening, for the purpose of taking into consideration the reply of the Minister for Justice to a deputation which waited upon him recently, relative to certain decisions given at the Water Police Court by Mr. G. W. F. Addison, S.M., which are alleged to have operated unfairly against the cabmen. Mr. C. Prince presided over the gathering. Amongst other things, it was resolved to present a petition to the Legislative Assembly, asking for the appointment of a select committee to inquire into the conduct of Mr. Addison, relative to certain remarks alleged to have been made by him in his capacity as magistrate when adjudicating in the police courts re licensed drivers. A report appears elsewhere.

THE Jubilee Lodge of the U. A. O. Druids, held its fortnightly meeting on Wednesday evening last, at the School of Arts, Burwood, the attendance being numerous, and the Arch Druid presided. After the usual routine of business had been dealt with, five candidates for admission presented themselves, and were duly initiated into the mystic rites, and four were nominated for membership. The officers of the Royal Oak Lodge, Balmain, on an official visit, were received with Druidic honours. During the evening the lodge adjourned for harmony, when the visitors entertained in an able manner all present. Votes of thanks were given to the visiting officers for their attendance and participation of the evening's enjoyment, Bros. Fordham and Morgan (on behalf of the Royal Oak), and Bro. Atkins (for the Rose of Rockdale) in happy terms replying. The Jubilee resolved to pay an official visit on 20th instant to the Royal Oak Lodge. The lodge closed in due form at 10.30 p.m.

THE letter of our London correspondent which appears in another column deals with the Bulgarian question, and the latest move at the St. Petersburg Court either to compel Prince Ferdinand to withdraw or lead to his ejectment by Turkey. The discussion in the House of Commons on the subject of the New Hebrides is likewise spoken of. Amongst the other topics are the alleged offer by the Government of New South Wales of 300,000 acres of land for the civilisation of the aborigines of the colony; also the proclamation of the Land League, and the English wheat harvest.

OUR Paris letter will be found in another column. The principal subjects with which the writer deals are the New Hebrides question and the increasingly cordial relations between France and Russia.

OUR St. Petersburg letter, which will be found in another column, deals with the repressive measures of the Government in regard to the Universities. It also touches upon the questions arising out of the complications in Bulgaria, and the state of affairs in Afghanistan. Amongst the other questions alluded to are the extension of the Russian railways in Central Asia, and the anti-German law.

IN his letter of August 26 our London correspondent says:—"The Very Rev. Alphonsus O'Neil, accompanied by four members of the Order of Passionists, will embark for Sydney next month, on the invitation of Cardinal Moran, for the purpose of opening up a House of the Passionists in your city."

OUR London correspondent, writing on August 26, says:—"The cricketing team which Mr. G. F. Vernon is taking out to Australia, under the auspices of the Melbourne Club, will consist of the following gentlemen and professionals:—Gentlemen: the Hon. W. P. Hawke (captain), Messrs. W. W. Read, G. F. Vernon, T. P. O'Brien, A. E. Newton, M. P. Bowden, and A. C. Stoddart. Players: Messrs. Abel, Attewell, Peel, Bates, Rawlins, Beaumont."

MUCH sympathy (says our London correspondent in his letter of August 26) is felt in society for Lord Augustus Loftus in the bankruptcy proceedings which are now pending against him, the more particularly as the noble lord is the first British ambassador who has figured in the bankruptcy court. Nothing is known of the circumstances of the case beyond the fact that his lordship was, last Saturday, adjudicated a bankrupt on the petition of Mr. Samuel Cogel, a West End money-

Stalker, whose debt is set down at £788. Some observations which appeared in the Pall Mall Gazette of Tuesday indicate that the noble lord crippled himself by the style which he was compelled to keep up during his embassy at St. Petersburg, particularly while the festivities attendant upon the marriage of the Duke of Edinburgh were proceeding. The salary he enjoyed at St. Petersburg was £10,000 a-year; but his expenses seem to have exceeded that sum.

LAST Saturday afternoon, at St. Matthew's, Bankstown, a purse of sovereigns was presented to Mr. R. Rook, late catechist of the district, by the Rev. E. A. Colvin, on behalf of the parishioners. Mr. Colvin spoke of the earnestness and energy with which Mr. Rook had carried on his work amongst the people and expressed the great pleasure it gave him to present a testimonial to one who had been a true friend and a valued helper to him in the parish. Mr. Rook, in a few well-chosen words, thanked his friends for their thoughtful consideration of him, and assured them that their kindness would be an incentive to him in the work to which he had devoted himself.

ON Thursday night last a special service was held to commemorate the dedication of Christ Church, Guildford. The little church had been exquisitely decorated with flowers and evergreens by members of the choir and others, headed by Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Boyd, and was well filled with worshippers, many of whom had travelled long distances to be present. The service was full choral (Tallis in C), and was admirably conducted by the Rev. Lynton Taylor, of Stanmore, who also preached the sermon, owing to the indisposition of the Rev. D. E. Evans Jones, vicar of the parish. The choir had been strengthened by the presence of kind friends from neighbouring choirs, and acquitted themselves well, receiving valuable aid from the organist, Mr. F. G. Bennett, of Strathfield. The collection was in aid of the choir fund.

THE final portion of the celebration of the second anniversary of the Free Church of England, Kogarah, in the form of a tea, public meeting, and sacred concert, took place at the Oddfellows' Hall, Kogarah, on Thursday evening last. There was a good attendance. Mr. J. S. Hawthorne, M.L.A., presided, and referred to the establishment of the church and the great success that had attended it since its formation. Messrs. Hollingworth and Caton also gave short addresses appropriate to the occasion. The concert was assisted by Mrs. Downing, Mrs. Melville, Misses Hollingworth, Messrs. C. M'Kern, Stonier, and others, who ably contributed to the evening's enjoyment, and at the conclusion of the programme were awarded a hearty vote of thanks for their kindness, on the motion of Mr. Jackson. A similar compliment to the chairman terminated the proceedings, and after the singing of the National Anthem and cheering for the Queen, the assemblage dispersed.

A CORRESPONDENT, who subscribes himself "Truth," writes agreeing with "every word in the letter signed 'Leather Jacket' regarding our fish supply," which was published in Thursday's Herald. He says:—"For some years past a number of Italians have almost taken possession of our fish market, and these men have banded themselves together to buy the fish at any cost, rather than let the European fish-sellers have any. Being nearly all single men, they are enabled to give a higher price than the man who has a wife and large family to support."

A CORRESPONDENT in South Africa writes to a gentleman in Sydney as follows:—"I believe you knew Baron Lüderitz. About a month before I returned here he made a voyage of discovery down the Orange River in a canvas boat, and on reaching the river's mouth was foolish enough to put to sea in his frail craft, with the hope (I believe) of reaching Angra Pequena. He was never heard of again, and there is no doubt that he perished; also, two men who were with him. I learn that his estate in Germany has been administered, there being no doubt whatever of his death."

YESTERDAY morning the dead body of one of the unfortunate men drowned at Botany on Saturday last was found floating in the water not very far away from the scene of the sad fatality. The discovery was made by two fishermen, named respectively Samuel Bagnall and James Smith, who's on their way from Botany to Lady Robinson's Beach. The men at once communicated with the police of the district, and the body was shortly afterwards taken to the South Sydney morgue. The body, which was but slightly emaciated, was clad in the uniform of an artilleryman, and has been identified as that of Frank Barbour. An inquest in connection with the matter will be held to-day.

AN act of bravery was witnessed yesterday morning in the vicinity of the Pyrmont baths, when W. J. Rivers, a seaman, while on board the tug Scylla, saw a lad struggling in the water a short distance away. Rivers immediately jumped overboard, and cleverly rescued the unfortunate boy. He then rubbed the little fellow dry and otherwise ministered to his wants.

AN extremely painful accident happened yesterday week to Mr. Cotter, master butcher, of Phillip-street, of this city. Whilst riding on horseback in Pitt-street, his horse slipped on the wooden blocks, and threw him under the wheels of a waggon laden with cement, the consequence being that he had one of his legs completely crushed above the ankle. He is now under the care of Drs. Tarraut and Jackson, who are unable to state at present whether they will have to resort to amputation or not. Mr. Cotter, who has been in business in the locality mentioned for over 20 years, has the sympathy of many kind inquiring friends.

WE have to acknowledge the receipt of a cheque for £1 1s. from Mr. M. Metcalfe for Mr. Charles Collett of No. 13, Hanover-street, Waterloo. Mr. Charles Collett attempted to save the life of the girl Kain, who was burnt to death on Tuesday last, and as a result of the excitement is suffering from a paralytic stroke, which, as he is a poor man, has placed his family in the most straitened circumstances.

THE Primate will preach a special sermon on behalf of St. John's parochial day schools to-morrow morning at St. John's, Darlinghurst. It is probable that the Primate will allude to the education question in his discourse.

THE following is the order of service in St. Andrew's Cathedral on Sunday next:—Morning, 11: Te Deum, Smart, in F; anthem, "Send out Thy light" (Gounod). Afternoon, 3.15, special choral service: Magnificat, Stainer, in D; Nunc Dimittis, Stainer, in D; anthem, "I will give thanks" (Barnby). "Thou Lord our refuge" (Mendelssohn). The choir will be assisted by members of most of the city churches. The Most Rev. the Primate will preach on "The music of the Bible." Offertory in aid of the choir fund.

TO-MORROW, the anniversary of the Princes-street Wesleyan Sunday School will be celebrated. The Rev. Jos. Woodhouse, Rev. John MacNeil, and Rev. W. G. R. Stephinson (President of the Conference), will preach. The scholars, under the leadership of Mr. H. D. Gilbert, will sing special hymns at each service.

LAST night a sale of work was held in Union-street North schoolroom, in aid of the Young Men's Literary and Social Club. The sale, which is very successful, is to be continued this evening.

THE band of the Industrial Blind Institution will perform in the Zoological Gardens on Monday afternoon, from 2 till 5 o'clock. The following is the programme:—March, "Bugle Call;" fantasia, Welsh airs; valse, "Boomerang;" polka, "Cornstalk;" fantasia, English airs; march, "Jubilee;" valse, "Little Nell," galop, "Ascot;" "God Save the Queen."

IN the report of the proceedings in Parliament on Wednesday last, Mr. Hawken, when moving his resolution re municipal associations, was made to say that there was in existence at the present time a Municipal Association comprising some 18 municipal councils. The number was inaccurately stated; it should have been 80.

THE following is the report of the Benevolent Asylum for the week ending September 28, 1887:—Admitted, 4 women, 5 children; birth, 1; death, 0; discharged, 3 women, 5 children; remaining in the house, 88 women, 116 children; total, 204. Provisions distributed: 1943 loaves bread; 1217lb. flour, 612lb. meat, 546lb. sugar, 137lb. tea, 60½lb. sago, 156lb. rice, 85lb. oatmeal. Fresh applications for relief, 6; cases reported by the inspector, 66; in 15 cases the relief was discontinued, in 1 case the rent money was disallowed; total number of cases relieved, 679.

OPENING OF THE HUNGARIAN PARLIAMENT.

(REUTER'S TELEGRAM.)

BUDA-PESTH, SEPT. 29.

The Hungarian Parliament was opened to-day. The Speech from the Throne states that the relations of Austria and Hungary with the other Powers remain friendly, but the general situation in Europe requires that the military power of the Empire should be strengthened, and every effort will be made to maintain peace, which, it is believed, will be assured for the future.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN AT BIRMINGHAM.

[BY CABLE.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, SEPT. 30.

Mr. Joseph Chamberlain delivered an address at Birmingham last night, in the course of which he declared that England was bound to support a fair and reasonable presentment of the Canadian claims in connection with the fisheries question. Although the federation of the Empire was not yet within the scope of practical politics, anything that would draw closer the ties of mutual friendship, and guarantee the peace and civilisation of the world, should be strongly fostered.

In referring to the Irish question, Mr. Chamberlain expressed the opinion that since no agreement had been arrived at regarding Home Rule for Ireland, Parliament ought to deal with the questions of religious equality, local government, and economy in the public service, on the lines of Lord Randolph Churchill's Irish land proposals, without pledging British credit.

ATTEMPT TO WRECK A SPECIAL TRAIN.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

A dastardly attempt has been made to wreck the special train in which the Governor and party were conveyed to Charlton on the occasion of the recent Agricultural Show. The matter has been kept secret in the meantime, in the hope that the police would be able to bring the offender or offenders to justice. According to the report which has come to hand, a platelayer discovered a pile of stones on the railway line between Keneg and Charlton, but the obstructions were removed in time to prevent the intended outrage. The police have not yet succeeded in shesting home the crime to the perpetrators.

AUCKLAND, FRIDAY.

The Premier, Sir Robert Stout, tendered his resignation to the Governor to-day. Major Atkinson was sent for by the Governor, and had an interview with his Excellency this afternoon. He consented to undertake the formation of a new Ministry, but asked for time to enable him to select his colleagues.

SMALLPOX IN LAUNCESTON.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.)

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

The Central Board of Health decided to-day that all passengers arriving from Tasmania shall be subjected to 15 days' quarantine. The Union Company's steamship Mararoa, from New Zealand, via Hobart, and the Tasmanian Steam Navigation Company's steamship Flinders, from Launceston, were lying at the Heads awaiting the decision of the board. The Mararoa had 100 passengers, 15 of whom were from Hobart. The Flinders brought 70 passengers from Launceston. The whole of these now have either to submit to a detention of 15 days at the quarantine station or return from whence they came.

The mails for Europe brought by the Mararoa and Flinders are to be despatched by the Orizaba to-morrow. They will be taken ashore and thoroughly fumigated, and sent on to Melbourne.

HOBART, FRIDAY.

There is nothing new in regard to the smallpox at Launceston. All the patients are reported to be going on well, and no new cases are notified. One man tried to escape from quarantine at Launceston, but he was stopped. The steamer Devon has been placed in quarantine. The crew were vaccinated. The Union Company's steamers have been ordered not to call here at present. The general opinion here is that the action of Victoria and the other colonies is harsh and unnecessary, as all the suspected persons and known cases are isolated.

AUCKLAND, FRIDAY.

The Union Company's steamers will discontinue calling at Hobart, in consequence of the outbreak of smallpox.

THE NEW HEBRIDES.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

A public meeting was held in the Melbourne Town Hall to-night, to consider the present condition of affairs at the New Hebrides. Between 1200 and 1500 persons were present, and the chair was occupied by the Mayor. The first resolution, moved by Mr. James Balfour, M.L.C., and seconded by the Rev. G. Buchanan, affirmed that the British and Australian interests in the New Hebrides which had arisen from the discovery of the group, and the survey of the harbours of the coast, and also from 80 years' successful missionary enterprise, involving large sacrifice of life and expenditure of money, and from mercantile intercourse with the natives, deserve the most effective protection from the Empire. It was resolved that as regular steam communication between Australia and the New Hebrides would afford one of the best means of expressing sympathy with the British people residing there, and of supporting the interest of Great Britain on the islands, the Victorian Government be requested to take steps to secure the conveyance of a monthly mail between Melbourne and Havannah Harbour. The Mayor and the movers and seconders of the resolution were appointed a deputation to wait upon the Premier and lay the resolution before him. The meeting then closed.

Sir Graham Berry has forwarded to the Premier a copy of the latest remonstrance he has addressed to the Secretary of State for the Colonies in reference to the French occupation of the New Hebrides. It is as follows:—

"Sir,—I have the honour to enclose a copy of a telegraphic despatch which I have received from my Government, and which I am to request you to communicate to the Prime Minister. I gather from its terms that Mr. Gillies believes the State of the New Hebrides to have again become somewhat critical, and that it demands the vigilant attention of Her Majesty's Government. I am also persuaded that the unsatisfactory statements lately made in the House of Commons on this subject have exercised a certain influence on the debates in the Parliament of Victoria respecting the proposals of the Colonial Conference, and that my Government felt that the time has come when a decided stand should be made against the pretexts of the French for their continued occupation of those islands. I would therefore submit that before Parliament rises for the autumnal recess, it is desirable that her Majesty's Government should give notice to the French Republic that a date be fixed for the evacuation of the posts at present occupied by their troops in the New Hebrides; and in the event of their refusal, that an alternative joint military occupation, which was suggested by my Government, be adopted.

"I have, &c., "GRAHAM BERRY."

THE SITUATION AT SAMOA.

[BY CABLE.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

AUCKLAND, FRIDAY.

Later news from Samoa states that there is little alteration in the state of affairs. Malietoa is still at large. Large numbers of the opposition chiefs have sworn allegiance to Tamasese.

Much disappointment is felt at the neutrality of England.

QUEENSLAND.

BRISBANE, FRIDAY.

In the Legislative Assembly to-day, a long discussion took place on a motion by Mr. E. Palmer,—"That in the opinion of the House it is desirable that a line of railway from Normanton to Croydon be constructed immediately." The necessity for the construction of the line was strongly urged by the mover, and supported by other members. The Government favoured the construction of the line, and on the suggestion of the Premier the motion was amended, providing that a sufficient part of the money authorised for the Normanton-Croydon line be appropriated for that purpose. Mr. Dickson moved the previous question, but this was negatived by 30 to 4, and Mr. Palmer's amended resolution was carried. The Premier promised to introduce the necessary measure to give effect to the resolution. The House then went into Committee of Supply to consider the estimates. Some items were passed, and the House adjourned at 20 minutes past 10 o'clock.

TASMANIA.

HOBART, FRIDAY.

In the Assembly to-day, the Ministry notified that they would make a statement of the financial position on Tuesday next.

VICTORIAN REVENUE RETURNS.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

MELBOURNE FRIDAY.

The revenue returns for the first quarter of the current financial year show a fairly satisfactory result, though a fourth of the estimated revenue for the 12 months has not been reached. The quarter just ended is generally the dullest of the year, consequently the apparent falling-off has no significance. For the three months just closed the Treasurer has received £1,692,217, as against £1,536,565 for the corresponding period of last year. The Customs Department shows an increase, as compared with that period, of £82,000, including £7000 more from duties on live stock, which have risen from £7275 to £14,567, or more than 100 per cent. Spirit duties gave £6000 in excess. The new duties on sugar brought up the receipts from £26,148 to £37,315. Tobacco and snuff returned £10,000 more, but there is a falling off of £23,000 under the heading of "Articles subject to ad valorem duties." Excise and inland revenue swelled from £94,217 to £129,390, due principally to an increase of £33,000 in the duties on the estates of deceased persons. The land revenue has improved slightly, the total being £128,103, as against £124,723. In the Public Works division there is an advance of £50,000, of which the railways are credited with £43,513. The returns from this department for the three months having been £584,716, as against £541,203 for the corresponding period of last year. The Post Office is only a formal item, because the amount derived from the sale of stamps is taken from that heading, and placed under fees. In fees the increase has been from £163,693 to £176,538, and of £13,000 thus to the good, stamps contributed £10,680, "miscellaneous" returned £55,736, as against £33,810, the increase being due almost entirely to the interest on the public account paid during the quarter having been £19,651, as against £18 18s. 5d., which was only received during the same quarter of last year.

REVENUE RETURNS OF SOUTH AUSTRALIA.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

ADELAIDE, FRIDAY.

The approximate returns of revenue for the quarter ended to-day show that the receipts were £469,974, of which £178,548 was from taxation, and £241,004 from public works and services. £60,768 was the territorial revenue, and £14,657 was obtained from other sources. As compared with the corresponding quarter of last year there is an increase of upwards of £81,000. The Customs show an increase of £48,000, public works and services £45,000, and other receipts £2000. There is a decrease in the territorial revenue of about £4000.

THE SILVERTON TRAMWAY.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

ADELAIDE, FRIDAY.

Mr. Jenkin Collier, director of the Silverton Tramway, arrived this morning from Melbourne, and leaves for Silverton immediately. It is anticipated that the tramway will be ready for traffic within two months. The Government will manage the traffic, and will subsequently consider the desirability of taking the line over from the company. The directors have applied to the Government of New South Wales for leave to extend the line through the Peolamacca tinfields to Wilcannia; but up till Thursday no reply had been received.

THE AWARDS AT THE ADELAIDE EXHIBITION.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

ADELAIDE, FRIDAY.

The following awards have been made for exhibits in the New South Wales courts at the Exhibition:—

T. F. Bevan, New Guinea trophy, first order of merit; the Executive Commissioner for New South Wales, grotto and fernery, 1; Jane Frost, Annandale, scrap knitting, 2; Margaret M'Leod, Clarence River, counterpane, 3; W. Cochrane, cabbage tree hats, 1; Rose Levy, flowers made of hair, 2; J. E. M. Russell, Bullion Bank, 3; Eliza Campbell, Eschank, fancy work, 2; Thompson Bros., furs, 2; T. J. Loder, furs, 2. Professor Liversidge was awarded first order of merit for an ethnological collection; and, on appeal, T. Jones and Co., of Sydney, were awarded first for venetian and wire blinds.

Mr. J. C. Neild had an interview with the executive committee at the Exhibition to-day, and discussed at length with the superintendent of juries the question of the judging of certain official exhibits. The committee decided that the following exhibits should be granted:—First awards: New South Wales Government, triple arch with statue, wine trophy, and decorations in the main court and eastern annexe; Executive Commissioner for New South Wales, bush scene, with fauna, and circular panorama of Sydney. Mr. Neild afterwards expressed satisfaction with the decision.

THE WRECK OF THE BARQUE WISTARIA.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

BRISBANE, FRIDAY.

The marine board has given its decision on the wreck of the Wistaria. The board are of opinion that there was not the slightest excuse for the loss of the vessel, neither can they account for the confused state of the master's brain otherwise than from advanced age. They regret that so long a career should be terminated by such an unfortunate accident, but consider that Captain Hummell is now unfitted to take charge of a sea-going vessel, and cancel his certificate. The mate, John Rogers, who holds a master's certificate, was worse than useless, and the board have grave doubts as to his competency as a navigator. They consider his qualification should be tested, and called upon him to present himself at once for examination. In the meantime they postpone their decision in his case.

The weather is dry, and rain is needed. Rabbits are increasing. Forty-eight scalps were tendered to-day to the scalp receiver.

A bazaar in aid of St. Peter's Parsonage Fund was opened to-day by the Venerable Archdeacon of Camden. There was a good attendance. The Archdeacon gave an admirable address on church work.

DUBBO, FRIDAY.

Six conditional purchases and five conditional leases were taken up here yesterday. The total area being 9774 acres, and the amount received £340.

The weather is very warm and bright.

CASINO, FRIDAY.

The Political League here has adopted a number of suggested amendments in the land laws, and has forwarded them to the Minister for Lands.

Another death has occurred from diphtheria, the victim being Mr. P. Balzser, jun. This is the fourth case within a short period.

The weather is beautifully fine.

GERMANTON, FRIDAY.

There was great competition for allotments sold at the Courthouse by the land agent from Albury. The ground was sold at prices up to £80 an acre. The ten lots were distributed among eight purchasers. The total of the realised £190.

GRAFTON, FRIDAY.

The borough council has passed a motion introduced by the Mayor, to make application to have the Government ferry handed over to the council. The Government returns show that the ferry does not pay. A report of the necessary works to be constructed out of the proceeds of the loan, which was laid on the table at last meeting, was ordered to stand over till next meeting. The estimated cost amounts to £10,000.

A public meeting has been called for Wednesday to decide whether a grand regatta shall be held at the end of the year.

A meeting of pastoral leaseholders will be held on October 13, to consider the action of the Minister for Lands in raising the rentals of Crown lands above the amounts fixed by the local land boards.

GULGONG, FRIDAY.

The weather is fine and warm, with cool nights.

KIAMA, FRIDAY.

All the light rolling-stock, consisting of ballast trucks and tip-waggons, have been removed by Messrs. Monie from the railway metals to a place near the south end of section 4; but the ballast engine is still on the line. This week the men have been removing the siding near the stone-crushing batteries used in shunting ballast trucks. Another day will probably suffice for this work, and Messrs. Monie's contract will then be complete. As one result of the Minister for Works' late visit to Kiama, the Roads Department have undertaken the renovation of the road between the town and the terminus at Porter's Garden Beach.

A wild flower show was opened at Jamberoo yesterday, and was a great success.

The weather continues cool for this time of the year, but it is exceedingly enjoyable.

NEWCASTLE, FRIDAY.

The works on the new wharf, adjacent to the A. A. Co.'s wharf, are being rapidly pushed forward. Pile-driving is being actively proceeded with, and the wharf will be a great boon when completed.

The benefit concert to Mr. A. H. Gee, the well-known vocalist, at the Victoria Theatre, last night, was a great success.

3000 persons attended the Roman Catholic school picnic to Lake Macquarie yesterday.

TAMWORTH, FRIDAY.

At the Circuit Court to-day, Frederick Cardan pleaded guilty to a charge of horse-stealing. Francis Chardon, alias George Mortimer, charged with horse-stealing, was convicted. Both were remanded for sentence. George Layton, charged with sheep-stealing, was acquitted.

Mr. W. J. Boydell, for nine years manager of the Bank of Australasia here, has been promoted to Newcastle. He will be succeeded by Mr. Stanton, from Narrabri.

WAGGA WAGGA, FRIDAY.

It is stated this evening that, in consequence of indisposition, Cardinal Moran will not attend the opening of the new St. Michael's Church, on Sunday.

WARIALDA, FRIDAY.

A meeting of ladies, convened by the Police Magistrate, at the request of Lady Carrington, with reference to the Queen's Fund, was held at the Courthouse on Tuesday. There was a good attendance, and several letters were read from ladies, who were unable to be present, promising support. A committee was appointed, and collecting cards were distributed.

The weather is very dry, with warm days and frosty nights. Rain is wanted.

The Pastures and Stock Board have decided to reduce the scale of bonuses on scalps to 4d. all round for marsupials, and 5s. for native dogs. Over £2000 has been paid away during the last three months.

Indignation is expressed by the pastoral lessees in the district at the action of the Minister for Works in raising their rents from the award of the land board. In almost every holding an increase has been made, and it is considered that if the awards of the board, who in most instances are personally acquainted with the character and capabilities of the holdings, are not adhered to, they might just as well not exist. Some of the lessees have an enormous rent.

180 acres of land were taken up yesterday on the Cooloottai run.

WAUGH'S Baking Powder obtained the only first-class award for highest degree of merit. Waugh's Baking Powder is the best.—[ADVT.].

SHIPPING REPORTS, &c.

CUSTOM HOUSE.—Entered Outwards, September 30: Jane, three-masted schooner, 256 tons, Captain R. Evans, for Fremantle, via Newcastle; Anne Theresa, schooner, 84 tons, Captain L. Petersen, for Normanton; Dr. Mezger, barque, 639 tons, Captain Engelstad, for Rotterdam; Corinna (s.), 830 tons, Captain H. C. White, for Hobart; Ranelagh (s.), 333 tons, Captain W. Sinclair, for Rockhampton, via ports; Quirsing (s.), 653 tons, Captain Robert Armstrong, for Melbourne; Barra bool (s.), 586 tons, Captain L. Tisdal, for Brisbane; Rodondo (s.), 719 tons, Captain C. J. Nightingall, for Melbourne; Konowarra (s.), 497 tons, Captain James Tozer, for Melbourne, via Newcastle; Taupo (s.), 406 tons, Captain F. Fielding, for Lord Howe and Norfolk Islands.

The P. and O. Company's R.M.S. Rome took her departure for London, via Melbourne and Adelaide, yesterday, at noon precisely. As the weather was bright and fine, there was an unusually large attendance of spectators to witness the casting off of the mail boat. For the season of the year the Rome had a well-filled list of passengers, and by the time she leaves Albany but little of her passenger accommodation will be left vacant. Among those who are going home by her is Lady Broome, wife of his Excellency the Governor of Western Australia. The vessel took a large and valuable cargo, the principal lines of which were wool, tin, copper, and other produce. Large additions will be made to the cargo at Melbourne and Adelaide. The first time that the Rome has been under the command of Captain Barrett, she yesterday presented an appearance which was quite in keeping with the scrupulous cleanliness and order which she has always exhibited when under the command of the commodore of the fleet, Captain G. F. Cates. The most favourable expressions were heard on all sides in regard to her internal appearance, and when she was moving out into the stream, for heading down the bay, about her exterior. As the tide was very low at midday, the Rome had no sooner got away from the Quay than she took the ground. All efforts on the part of the tug Commodore to move her having failed, the services of the steamer Glenelg were also called into requisition. Soon after the latter vessel took hold of the Rome the mailboat floated off, and proceeded on her way. Immediately after she commenced to steam ahead an accident occurred to the Commodore. It appears that the Commodore's line was not let go as soon as the Rome got under way, and the result was that she slewed round and striking the mail boat with her stern received considerable injury thereto. The woodwork was damaged, and a couple of the plates so much injured that they will have to be renewed. The Rome cleared the Heads at 1.50 p.m.

The steamship Burmah, of Messrs. W. Howard Smith and Sons' line, made a quick passage to Brisbane this week. She left Struth's wharf at 5 o'clock on Tuesday evening, and arrived at the Municipal wharfs, Brisbane, before breakfast on Thursday morning.

On September 9, when the ship Illawarra was in lat. 40° S. and long. 88° E., Captain Carvosso passed some wreckage, apparently masts and yards, and the next morning a cask and other debris were seen.

The steamer Rosedale crossed the Manning bar at 8.30 p.m., September 29, arrived in port at 10 a.m., September 30. Experienced light variable winds and fine weather throughout. Cargo—618 bags maize, 4 bundles sheepskins, 87 hides, 190 pigs, 11 coops poultry, 134 cases eggs, 3 casks tallow, 1 bag bones, and 40 packages sundries.

The P. and O. Company's R.M.S. Clyde was berthed at the Circular Quay yesterday.

Yesterday the ship Skaimorlie was berthed at Dalton's Wharf.

To-day the barque Apollo is to be towed from the stream to Pyrmont Bight, where she will put out her cargo of boards &c.

The ship Sir Walter Raleigh having been cleaned and painted in Mort's Dock, will be floated out to-day, and come up to a berth at the Central Wharf.

To-day the barque Dr. Mezger will be towed from the Railway Wharf to an anchorage in the stream.

It may not be generally known that on the last voyage home of the R.M.S. Garonne, her Majesty Eugenie, ex-Empress of the French, was a passenger from Malta. She charmed everybody on board by her amiability, and her courtly, yet pleasing, manners; and a number of New South Welshmen who were passengers have a very vivid and kindly recollection of the Empress. Before leaving the ship her Majesty conveyed to Captain White, and also to Mr. Fox, the purser now on the Lusitania), and the surgeon her appreciation of the kind attention she had received on board.

Yesterday morning Mr. John Williams, owner of the vessel, received a telegram stating that the three-masted schooner Florida had been totally wrecked on Browse Island, on the 12th instant, and that the crew were saved. The Florida was only purchased about two months ago by Mr. Williams, and went from here to Normanton with a general cargo, under the command of Captain Robert Coe. At that port she was taken up to proceed to Adelaide to load a cargo of flour for Cooktown and Townsville, and she began her voyage from Normanton on the 27th August. Browse Island, the place where the accident occurred, is a notorious place for disasters to shipping, no fewer than half a dozen vessels having been lost there within as many years. The Florida was a strong-looking vessel of 216 tons register, and was built at Perth in 1875. She was insured in the South British Insurance office for £700. Captain Coe and the crew will come on to Sydney as soon as possible.

The P. J. S. Company's steamer Brighton, having been cleaned and painted, is to resume duty in the Manly passenger trade to-day.

The T. S. N Company's steamer Corinna, having been fumigated, was yesterday towed from Spring Cove to a berth at the company's jetty, Grafton Wharf, where she will discharge her cargo. The following is a list of her passengers:—Miss M'Clure (in the saloon), Mr. and Mrs. Ikin and family (7, and five Chinese (in the steerage.) A summary of her cargo appears under the heading of "Imports."

Monday having been proclaimed a public holiday the Merchants' Exchange will be closed.

The Gibb liner Pathan, for Melbourne, did not clear the Heads until half-past 8 o'clock yesterday morning.

The Orient Company's R.M.S. Lusitania was yesterday moved from Neutral Bay to the company's wharf, Circular Quay.

The three-masted schooner May, from Bluff Harbour, with a freight of oats, entered the Heads at half-past 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and anchored in the upper part of Neutral Bay. She is a Sunderland-built craft, about 16 years old, and is owned in Wellington by Messrs. Turnbull and Co. Sailing on the 16th ultimo, the May experienced easterly winds until the following day, and light S.W. and westerly winds from that date until the 20th. Unsteady N. to N.W. winds followed until the 28th, when a S.W. gale was encountered, and the vessel had to be hove-to for a few hours. On the 27th the weather moderated, and light variable winds were had afterwards till arrival.

The North German Lloyd's steamer Habsburg, from Bremen, via ports, left Melbourne at 1 p.m. yesterday, and should therefore arrive here to-morrow morning.

The China Navigation Company's steamship Soochow cleared at the Customs yesterday for Hongkong

AMUSEMENTS.

THE THEATRES.

"Henry V." was finally produced at Her Majesty's Theatre last evening, and in the presence of a good house. This evening Mr. George Rignold will appear in comedy as well as drama. The comedy drama "Alone" will form the first part of the performance, which will conclude with the musical piece "Black-eyed Susan." Mr. Rignold has appeared before in these plays in Sydney, and with undoubted success. It will be sufficient under the circumstances to remind theatre-goers of the presentation of these plays this evening.

The Gaiety Theatre will be reopened this evening, and under the management of Mr. Dampier, who has had many important alterations made and improvements effected for the comfort of his numerous patrons. The opening production is the play "Shamus O'Brien," which, it is announced, will be represented for the first time in Australia this evening. Mr. Dampier will play the part of "Shamus," and Miss Dampier will represent "Mary Kavanagh." In other respects the cast is a good one, including the principal members of Mr. Dampier's company.

The Royal Standard Theatre will be re-opened this evening by the Standard Minstrel and Burlesque Company, in a variety programme of considerable merit. The performers include Messrs. Hosea Easton, Charley Holly, Percy Shannon, Frank Phillips, Vincent Magee, and many other celebrities.

At the other theatres no change is announced. The Royal Theatre is being largely patronised, the "Silver King" apparently being as popular as ever. At the Criterion Theatre "The Twelfth Night," with the admirable young actress Miss Essie Jenyns as Viola, is being produced with splendid effect. There have been excellent houses every evening during the week. At the Alhambra Music Hall there are invariably startling novelties on Saturday evenings, and, as usual, a good programme will be given this evening.

On Friday evening next Mr. G. S. Titheradge will conclude a four years' engagement with Messrs. Williamson, Garner, and Musgrove, and the occasion will be marked by a farewell complimentary benefit to him, when he will perform for the last time this season as the Silver King.

CONCERT AT PETERSHAM.

An instrumental and vocal concert was given last night in the Congregational School-hall, Petersham, in aid of the funds of the Golden Chain Lodge, I.O.G.T. The hall was comfortably filled, but by no means crowded, which was doubtless due to the fact of there being another, and apparently more attractive entertainment at the Town Hall. The concert opened with an overture "La Couronne d'Or," by the members of the Sydney English Concertina Band, numbering thirteen instruments. Their performance was a great musical treat, and at its close they were rewarded with the most hearty applause. "The Death of Nelson," by Mr. Monk, followed, after which Mrs. Jackson sang the ballad "Bid me good-bye and go" very prettily. A pianoforte solo by Mrs. Cleary, from "Maritana," was played with clear execution, and a very clever and at times dainty touch, and the violin solo by Mr. E. Stevenson which succeeded it ("The Slumber Song"—Schubert) was one of the best morceaux of the evening. The song "Golden Love," by Mr. Downe, was sung in good time and tune, and with much feeling. Mr. F. J. Palmer played the "Blue Bells of Scotland," with variations, on the English concertina with great skill, proving himself to be a most capable musician, so far, at least, as that instrument was concerned. The items "Alice, where art thou?" and a number from "Rigoletto" (sung in Italian), by Mr. W. Walshe, displayed that gentleman's fine voice to the utmost advantage, and elicited the most unbounded applause. The same may be said with regard to the song "Shipwrecked," by Mr. A. Edward. This elicited a peremptory encore, which took the shape of another nautical ballad, entitled "Little Jem the Powder Monkey." Mr. Edward was in splendid voice, and his contributions may be looked upon as the gems of the evening. A pianoforte solo by Mrs. Cleary and Miss M. Rowley, a comic song by Mr. C. H. Prust, and a pianoforte and concertina trio from "Norma," brought a very attractive first part to a close. The second part was as pleasant and as diversified as the first, among the principal performers being the members of the concertina band, Messrs. Monk, Downe, Walshe, Stevenson, Evans, and Edward, and Mrs. Jackson and the Misses Evans, the National Anthem bringing the entertainment to a close. Mrs. Cleary acted as accompanist during the evening, and the concert was throughout a decided success.

Prominent amongst the other various amusements which are always well patronised on Saturdays are the Columbia Elite Skating Rink, at the Exhibition Building, and the Society Skating Rink, at Double Bay.

The intercolonial Cavalry Tournament (under the auspices of the Sydney Lancers) will take place to-day, at the Agricultural Grounds, Moore Park. The programme of events is a splendid one.

At the School of Arts a lantern entertainment for children will be given by Mr. Cyril Haviland, at 3 o'clock this afternoon.

There was a pleasant gathering at the Petersham Town Hall last evening, the occasion being the concluding "hop" of the season arranged by the Petersham Owls. The assemblance was very large, and included many visitors from the city. After a variety of musical selections had been given, dancing was commenced, and was continued till the small hours of the morning.

The Loyal Crown Lodge, in the Order of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, Manchester Unity, celebrated its seventh anniversary last evening by holding a social and smoke concert in St. Michael's schoolroom, Fitzroy-street. Brothers from other lodges and districts were present, and consequently the hall was well filled. Brother John Bell, D.G.M. of the district, was chairman, and had around him several gentlemen who have for many years been identified with the Order of Oddfellows. The evening was spent in a most enjoyable way, several of the Brothers assisting with songs or solos on the violin or piccolo, to the delight of the members present. Several encores were most enthusiastically demanded, but the length of the programme would not permit. Between the songs, the toasts of the "Manchester Unity and Board of Directors," "The Sydney District," and "The Loyal Crown Lodge" and others, were given and met with hearty response. One of the features of the evening was the presentation of a large picture frame containing the photographs of the past and present officers of the lodge to the lodge by Bro. C. French. Bro. Wynes made the presentation. Mr. C. French, after a hearing could be obtained, suitably responded. The Loyal Crown Lodge is in a very flourishing condition, having a credit balance of nearly £400. It was getting late when the party broke up.

The committee of ladies entrusted with the management of the ball to be held in aid of the Women's Refuge at Tempe, met yesterday at the Good Samaritan Institute, when satisfactory progress was reported. Several details were discussed and arranged, and the meeting was adjourned until Wednesday next at 3 o'clock. A full list of the ladies who compose the committee will be found in our advertising columns. It must be noted that tickets for the ball are only procurable from the committee and from the treasurers and secretaries.

BALL AT GOVERNMENT HOUSE.

His Excellency the Governor and Lady Carrington gave their second ball this season at Government House last evening, when about 500 guests were present. The arrangements were the same as on the previous occasion as regards the accommodation, the red drawing-room being added to the ballroom for dancing, and the floor of the former having received special attention was equally favoured with the latter by the dancers. The guests arrived with almost regal punctuality, thus enabling Lord and Lady Carrington to complete the reception before the second waltz was finished. The floral decorations were especially beautiful, in one portion were the arum lily and a brilliant scarlet verbena—the blossoms arranged in large clusters, rivalling in size and surpassing in brilliancy the crown of a prize cineraria. In another portion hundreds of roses, "Souvenir de Malmaison," were grouped amid delicate greenery, and scattered their fragrance around. The arched dais, which was occupied by the band, was decked with pink azaleas; and in every possible niche beautiful flowers, choice bric-a-brac, or gems of art gladdened the eye and delighted the senses. The intercolonial and country visitors were nearly all present, and a gathering of town and suburban residents, which included representatives of the leading sections of the community, with Sir Henry Parkes, the Mayor and Mayoress of Sydney, &c. In the opening quadrille his Excellency the Governor danced with Lady Darley, Lady Carrington and the Hon. Thomas Garrett (Minister for Lands) being vis-a-vis. Later, in the Lancers, his Excellency danced with Miss Parkes, having Lady Carrington and Mr. G. H. Reid as vis-a-vis. The costumes of the ladies were unusually handsome. The distinguished hostess wore a tulle skirt and satin bodice of pale yellow, with a net work thickly ornamented with pearl sequins, covering a large portion of the front of the dress and forming the berthe, with tiara and suite of diamonds. Mr. and Mrs. Warner, Major-General Campbell and Miss Campbell, Mr. Robinson, A.D.C. to Sir Robert Hamilton (Governor of Tasmania), Miss Stawell, Miss Armitage, Dr. Ford, Mr. Pearson from Melbourne, Captain Lowe, Mr. Denne from India, Captain Abbott, and Mr. and Mrs. Hamilker Heaton were also present. Lord Shaftesbury left for New Zealand on Thursday morning. The beauty of the toilettes served to heighten the charms of the fair wearers, and it was generally remarked that such an assembly of pretty girls and lovely women has rarely been seen. The warm evening and the beautiful moonlight tempted many to the garden, whence Farm Cove looked to great advantage. Captain Hammill, and several officers of H.M.S. Nelson, Commander Field and Commander Pullen, with officers of the Lark and Dart, were present, the naval uniform adding much to the brilliant scene. Supper was served at 11, and in the culinary, as in all other arrangements, every possible attention had been given to ensure success. The programme was danced through, and, after a most enjoyable evening, the guests separated about 1 a.m. The galeries which have marked the social world of the last fortnight terminated in full lustre at Government House.

GOVERNMENT GAZETTE.

The following official notifications were published in yesterday's Government Gazette:—

Nuisances Prevention Act.—The "Nuisances Prevention Act, 1875," is to come into operation in the Borough of Petersham on the 1st day of December next.

Appointments.—Mr. Alexander Lobban to be a district inspector of schools under this Department, vice Mr. D. S. Cornelius Grady, John M'Clapham, John Morrison, Edward Guiser, John Flint, Michael M'Mahon, and Edward Morrison. The lands at Burragorang, each containing one acre, dedicated for Church of England church and burial-ground respectively, to be vested in the Church of England Property Trust, Diocese of Sydney.

Tenders Accepted.—The supply of Messrs. Warburton and Son has been accepted for the supply of about 70 tons of coal for the Quarantine station, North Head. The tender of Messrs. Ferris, Wilson, and Co. has been accepted for the supply of provisions, &c., on account of the Public service, to the Benevolent Asylum, Newington, from the 1st October, 1887, to the 31st March, 1888. The tender of Messrs. F. T. Wimler and Co. has been accepted for the supply of Hickok's ruling pens and furniture on account of the Public service. The tender of Mr. Albert Smith has been accepted for the erection of iron telegraph poles and two wires between Queanbeyan and Cooma.

THE CAVALRY TOURNAMENT.

As a preliminary to the Cavalry Tournament to take place to-day, a review of the mounted corps of New South Wales was held in Moore Park yesterday, and the occasion was made one of inspection by his Excellency the Governor. The hour fixed for the review was 3.30 p.m., but long before that, great crowd of spectators had taken possession of the park, and forming a cordon round the troops, watched their movements with interest. The bulk of the troops came, of course, from the country, and the following districts were represented:—West Camden, Illawarra, West Maitland, Gratton, Upper Clarence, and Ulmarra, the muster including a contribution of 20 of the Sydney Lancers, who were glorious in the bravery of decorative accoutrements, and escorted the Governor to the ground, arriving there at about 4 o'clock. The Lancers as a body were splendidly mounted and accoutred, but this fact did not take away from the efficiency of some of the country corps, who acquitted themselves most commendably considering the short training. Before his Excellency arrived, Drill-instructor R. R. Thompson put the rural contingent through its facings, and very neatly these were accomplished.

Lord Carrington, who was in the undress uniform of a Colonel of Lancers, arrived on the ground accompanied by Major-General Richardson, Major Mackenzie, Major Gascoigne, and Lord Hertie. The troops then went through a number of manœuvres, including the march past, the galloping past in columns, and, finally, skirmishing. Afterwards they were drawn up, and Lord Carrington addressed the men. He congratulated the cavalry on the turnout he had seen. Last year there were about 70 men on parade, as against 200 this year. He pointed out that too much credit could not be given to the gentlemen who gave their services to the country, and it was evident, from the remarks of the Premier at the military dinner in Sydney, that the Ministry intended to recognise and assist this movement. It was hardly possible to overestimate the value of a strong body of well-mounted and well-equipped horsemen in times of danger or invasion. If a landing were threatened or effected, they would be able to delay the advance of an enemy till the field guns and infantry could get up. He reminded them that a certain amount of ridicule was certain to be cast by thoughtless and ignorant people on a movement the object of which they could not understand; but he felt certain that the cavalry fully recognised the patriotic motives which brought them together, and he hoped before he left the colony to see the force properly established, and at least 2000 strong, and ready and able to turn out at a minute's notice for the honour and safety of the colony. The troops were dismissed soon after 5 o'clock. The following was the field state:—Officers, 2; men, 20; Illawarra Light Horse, 2 officers, 10 men; West Camden Light Horse, 2 officers, 10 men; West Maitland, 2 officers, 34 men; Grafton, 2 officers, 16 men; Ulmarra, 2 officers, 16 men; Upper Clarence, 2 officers, 34 men.

Health.—The summer will soon be upon us, therefore each citizen should see that the premises he resides in are in a thoroughly sanitary condition. To effect this it is necessary to use Hesse's Disinfectants, which can be had wholesale at 43, Elizabeth-street, and Messrs. Hooke, Tomsitt, and Co.'s; also retail from all grocers, chemists, and storekeepers. The price, in large tins, is 1s each; in bottles, from 6d each, and should be within the reach of all. Health is a great boon, and should be preserved at any cost. Therefore, see you get only Hesse's Disinfectants, which will be found to be the best article known. Referring to the above, which appeared in the Melbourne Daily Telegraph of 24th September, 1887, it is proposed to establish branch factories here for the manufacture of disinfectants, also for producing poudrette or guano from refuse of any description examined; from abattoirs, excrements, &c. Municipal bodies, syndicates, can obtain most advantageous terms by applying at 43, Elizabeth-street, Melbourne.—[Advt.]

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

THE TURF.

What promises to be a most successful meeting commences to-day at Canterbury Park, and will be continued and concluded on Monday. The racing track is in splendid condition, and the recent fine weather has helped to make the surroundings bright and pleasant. In addition to the usual suburban traffic, special trains will leave Redfern at 12.20 and 12.45 p.m. for Ashfield, whence cabs, 'buses, and other vehicles will convey visitors to the convincing ground. Racing will commence at 1.30 p.m. sharp, when the competitors engaged in the Flying Handicap will be sent on their mission by Mr. Kean. A large field may be anticipated, and those who seem to be the best in are Glen Elgin, Stamford, and Oakwood. The Park Stakes should also attract numerous contestants, and, though First Flaneur has been placed at the head of affairs, with the more than complimentary impost of 8st. 7lb., the son of Fair Duchess should have no chance with such leniently-treated performers as Winnie Agnes and Lady Yattendon. The October Handicap should bring about a great race, and those who should have most to say at the finish are Figtree, Phaon, and Frolic, while Kitawa's chance must not be overlooked. Toronto, Tilburn, and Fano should furnish a winner in the Disposal Stakes. The Stewards' Mile wears a very open appearance. Melanion and Victory share the honour of top weight with 12st. each, and with such loads to carry, their prospects do not appear very bright; but Leumeah, Hester, and Bertram may divide the honours. The programme, from which the scratched horses have been removed, appears elsewhere in this issue.

The weights for the handicaps to be decided at the annual meeting of the Patrick's Plains Jockey Club on Thursday and Friday next are promised to-day.

The latest scratchings include the Emily colt, Red Rose filly, Rosedale filly, Bonnie Queen, Redfern, Melos, Guelder Rose colt, The Dustman, and Gazette, out of the V. R. C. Maribyrnong Plate; Granny out of the October Handicap; Bound out of the Hurdle Race; and Sandy out of all engagements connected with the October meeting of the Canterbury Park Race Club.

Sportsmen should remember that the adjourned race meeting of the Yerong Race Club will be held on Wednesday next. Latest advices from that district state that the course is in grand condition, and that the committee have been making all the necessary arrangements to bring about a pleasant and successful gathering. A special train will leave Wagga Wagga for the trysting-place on Wednesday morning for the conveyance of passengers and racehorses, and visitors from the southern side can reach the course by the train which leaves Albury at 8.40 a.m.

Nominations for the V. R. C. Maribyrnong Plate should bear in mind that the first forfeit of 5 sovs. falls due on Monday next at 4 p.m., and that neglect to comply with the conditions of the stake will incur the liability of half-forfeit. At the same time, the V. R. C. Foal Stakes will require attention, when the first forfeit of 1 sov. must be declared and paid.

Owners who have horses engaged in the V. A. T. C. Great Foal Stakes and Caulfield Guineas are reminded that all scratchings must be made by 4 p.m. on Tuesday next, as horses that remain in after that hour will be considered acceptors and held liable for the sum of 3 sovs., which goes to the race fund.

The Melbourne Hunt Club hold their re-union at Flemington to-day, when half-a-dozen events will claim the attention of the southern sportsmen. Business will commence with the Hurdle Race, for which the prospects of Eaglet, Jack, and Landseer may be regarded as the most promising. Irishman heads the list in the Handicap Steeplechase with 11st. 12lb., but his chances do not look so bright as those of Bob Cooper and Tandstickor, who should finish a winner. Should Dunlop start in the Handicap Flat Race, he should have no difficulty in coming home in front, but in his absence the best in appear to be Menotti, Dufferin, and Childe Harold. Teddy Yuille should show prominently in the Corinthian Flat Race, and his stable mate Rocket, may appropriate the Selling event, while Ruby, Moonlight, and Hazelkirk should fill the places in the Hunt Club Cup.

The Fernmount correspondent of the Clarence and Richmond Examiner says: "In your sporting columns of the 17th the item having reference to the race mare Fidelity was read here with a little more than ordinary interest, as the matter had previously cropped up in a rather singular manner. A commercial traveller on a journey from Fernmount to Grafton reported that he had seen Fidelity running in the bush, and that he was quite satisfied as to the identity of the mare, as he had known her well when on the turf. Your correspondent, with some friends, having discovered the locality where the mare was reported seen, proceeded to the spot, when a bay mare well known here, and bred by Mr. John Cowan, of South Grafton, was the only one to be found. This same mare had recently been in training, and having a racing appearance, it was then thought our commercial friend was mistaken."

The Sydney Turf Club have announced the conditions for the Anniversary Handicap of 2000 sovs., to be run for at Randwick on January 26. The second horse receives 350 sovs. from the prize, while the third gets 150 sovs.; and it may be anticipated that such valuable stakes will attract a large number of entries, including the best performers in the Australian colonies. Particulars can be seen in this week's Sydney Mail.

The second race meeting to be held under the auspices of the Sydney Hunt Club has been fixed for the 22nd instant, when a six-event programme will be played out on the Canterbury Racecourse. The bill of fare is a most attractive one, embracing, as it does, hurdle-racing, flat-racing, and steeplechasing; and the prize list has been drafted on a liberal scale. Added money, amounting to £305, will be distributed over five events, and a valuable trophy, presented by the club, will form the prize for the remaining item, a welter handicap for bona-fide hunters.

The programme issued by the Victorian Trotting Club, for their meeting at Elsternwick Park on the 12th instant, will demand the attention of sportsmen on Monday. The programme is a comprehensive one, including trotting, hurdle-racing, steeplechasing, and flat-racing.

The conditions for the Carrington Stakes of 1000 sovs. and Tattersall's Club Cup, the leading items on the programme for their Summer meeting, to be held on December 31 and January 1, have been published, and the date of nomination for both events fixed for the 13th instant.

The most important gathering of which particulars are to hand by latest English files is that of the York August meeting held on the 23rd, 24th, and 25th. The Thirty-first North of England Biennial Stakes for three-year-olds, colts 8st. 10lb., fillies 8st. 5lb., 1½ mile, was won by Lord Zetland's bay colt Panzerschiff, by Wenlock from Speigeleschiff, who went to the post with a shade of odds on, and won easily by four lengths. He followed up his success on the third day by appropriating the Great Yorkshire Stakes for three-year-olds, colts 8st. 10lb., fillies 8st. 5lb., 1¼ mile, by three-quarters of a length from a field of five, the places having been filled by Lord Allesbury's chestnut colt Gallinule, by Isonomy from Moorhen, and Mr. Houldsworth's chestnut colt Cactus, by Springfield, from Celandine, and the distance was covered in 3min. 15sec. Panzerschiff was bred by Lord Zetland, his owner, and had a remarkably successful time of it as a two-year-old. He received forfeit in a match arranged with Footstep over the Rous Course at the Newmarket Second Spring Meeting, and subsequently won the Eglinton Stakes at York Spring, the Twenty-ninth Ascot Biennial Stakes, and the Stockbridge Foal Stakes. He also walked over for a Private (Post) Sweepstakes at the Bibury Club meeting. At Goodwood the son of Wenlock easily accounted for the valuable Richmond Stakes, making all the running and winning by three lengths, his nearest attendant being Freshwater. He next added the Redcar Two-year-old Stakes to his winning account. At Stockton, Lord Zetland's colt picked up the Hardwicke Stakes from an indifferent opposition, and at York was reserved for a Private Triennial Sweepstakes, in which Gloriation failed to stop his victorious career. Panzerschiff missed a couple of valuable engagements at Derby September with a view to the Champagne Stakes at Doncaster, for which he ran a dead heat with Grandison, Phil and Porcelain following the pair home. The stakes were then divided. Lord Zetland's colt sustained his first reverse in the Cheveley Stakes at the Newmarket Houghton meeting, failing in an attempt to give 18lb. to the well-tried Peep o' Day, who won by three-quarters of a length. This season Panzerschiff commenced by running second to the Lizard for the Twenty-ninth Ascot Biennial, the verdict being three lengths in favour of General Owen Williams's colt. The following day in the Twenty-fifth New Biennial he finished behind Kilwarlin, Hark, and Dardanelles, and was badly beaten in the Bognor Plate at Goodwood by Pierrepont, Priesthood, and Versacity. He had an easy task at Stockton in the Thirtieth Zetland Biennial, only Mosque and Camaraksaman throwing down the gauntlet, and at York on Tuesday, in the Thirty-first North of England Biennial he beat Lasso in a canter.

As the time approaches betting is becoming more spirited on the leading events of the V. A. T. C. and V. R. C. Spring Meetings. Yesterday a move was made on Silvermine for the Caulfield Cup, and about £5000 was taken at 10 to 1; while a few thousands were written about Volcano at 8 to 1. For the V. R. C. Derby, 200 to 100 was taken about Abercorn, the same price being still offered. Algerian was firm at 5 to 1, offered, for the Melbourne Cup; while Silver Prince was a shade firmer, 100 to 8 being the best offer. The Canterbury events were not touched, investors preferring to wait for the post betting.

THE MELBOURNE BETTING MARKET.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The only item of interest in the betting market to-day was the support awarded to Silvermine for the Caulfield Cup, £1500 being booked at 10 to 1 and wanted, there being no more money at the figure. 10 to 1 was offered to a couple of thousands against Volcano, but the colt had no friends at the price. Recall and Lara were each backed to a little money at 100 to 7 and 100 to 6 respectively. Not a single transaction was noted either on the Derby or Melbourne Cup, 2 to 1 being offered in "monkeys" against Abercorn for the Derby, and 4 to 1 against the Australian Peer, whilst 5 to 1 is the best offer against Algerian for the Cup. There was nothing doing at the Victorian Club in the evening. The following are the latest scratchings:—Melbourne Hunt Club Hurdle Race: Guilt. Steeplechase: The Irishman. Hunt Club Cup: Little John.

TASMANIAN RACING CLUB.

HOBART, Friday.

Entries were made to-day in connection with the Sires' Produce Stakes of the Tasmanian Racing Club. There are 25 in all. They include ten produce of Asservian, two of Manuka, two of King Arthur, four of Townley, and two of Napoleon.

THE HAWKESBURY RACE CLUB.

RICHMOND, Friday.

The Hawkesbury Race Club committee decided to-day to hold a race meeting on November 26. There will be six events, one of £200, and five of £100 each. One sovereign will nominate for each, no sweeps. The full programme will appear in the Sydney Mail next week. The autumn programme was also adopted, comprising 10 events, for which the added money will be £1800. The meeting is to finish on the Saturday previous to the A.J.C. Easter meeting.

The New South Wales Mining and Stock Exchange reports the following quotations:—Transactions: 500 Eveleens at 10s.; Williams' Mount Morgan, buyers £50, sellers £59; Gold Hills, paid up to 7s., buyers 7s., sellers 8s. 6d.; Mount Morgan, buyers £6 10s.; Ophir Deep Lead, paid up to £10, sellers £20; New Reform, sellers 7s.; New Reform Pups, paid up to 6s., sellers 6s.; Terrible Dick, paid up to £19, buyers £20, sellers £23; Lubra, sellers 6d.; Sunny Corner, sellers 6s. 9d.; Hell Hole (proprietary), buyers £900; Severn River, paid up to 20s., sellers 21s.; Giant's Den, paid up to 20s., sellers 6s.; Wesley, paid up to 20s., sellers 1s. 2d.

The hon. secretary of the Stock Exchange reports the crushing of the Band and Albion Gold Company, Ballarat, for the week to have been 330 tons stone, for a yield of 203ozs. gold.

The secretary of the Lewis' Ponds Gold and Silver-mining Company states that the company have shipped within the last fortnight 647 bags gold and silver ore (about 30 tons) to Europe, for treatment. This ore averages 1oz. 9dwt. 12gr. for gold, and 43oz. 19dwt. 12gr. for silver, to the ton of ore. The weather having now become settled, the company hope to ship from 30 to 40 tons per week.

The fourth half-yearly general meeting of shareholders in the Teralba Coal-mining Company, Limited, was held at the offices of Messrs Watt and Dodd, Pitt-street, yesterday, Mr. Andrew Armstrong presiding. The report and balance-sheet were unanimously adopted. It was shown that during the past six months the sinking of the pit had been suspended, pending result of negotiations for the sale of the company's property, which is still in abeyance. A site had been selected for a township area, which was now being laid out. Arrangements had also been entered into with the West Wallsend Coal Company for a joint construction of that part of the railway to the State line, which the company would use.

In another column will be found the prospectus of the New Chum Gold-mining Company, Limited, Croydon, Queensland, which is being floated with a capital of £40,000, in £1 shares. Fifteen thousand fully paid-up shares are retained by the present proprietors, and 35,000 contributing shares, issued as paid up to 7s. 6d. each, are offered to the public on terms which are set forth. The company is being formed to purchase and develop two claims upon the New Chum line of reef, Upper Twelve Mile, Croydon, Northern Queensland, known as the prospecting area No. 430 and No. 1 North, containing 650ft. on the line of reef by 400ft. wide.

The first general meeting of the shareholders in the Williams and Co. Mount Morgan Gold-mining Company, Limited, was held at the Sydney Exchange on Thursday. Mr. A. J. Lewington presided. There was a large attendance of shareholders. The report and balance-sheet were adopted unanimously, and Mr. T. Hungerford, the retiring director, was returned unopposed.

The prospectus of the Maiden Silver-mining Company, Rockwell Paddock, Barrier Ranges, will be found in another column. The proposed capital is £100,000, in £1 shares; of which 70,000, paid up to 15s., are offered to the public at 1s. per share on application, and 1s. 6d. on allotment. The company is being formed to purchase and mine on the property known as "Maiden's," on the Rockwell Paddock, consisting of three blocks, in all 90 acres, situate about 10 miles south-east of Broken Hill.

MANAGERS' REPORTS.

The mine manager of the Broken Hill South Silver Mine telegraphs that the main shaft is now down 97ft.—no change; and that the crosscut from No. 1 shaft has been extended 14ft.

Gold Hill Gold-mining Company, Burnt Yards, near Orange.—The mining manager reports, under date September 26: Since last report I have been still driving for Orchard's vein, and have broken a small hole through, just sufficient to let a current of air in. I carried excellent gold in the drive, and have a quantity of very good stone in safes, which I took out in putting the winze up from vein No. 2. I have also paddocked about 8 tons of very good stone. I intend to continue driving north and south until the battery is ready for crushing. The north drive is in 28ft. in pretty hard country, but on the whole the mine looks very healthy indeed. The erection of the battery is being proceeded with as fast as possible. Two of the directors visited the mine during the week, and endorsed my opinion respecting the richness of the stone, and the prospects of the mine generally. By them I sent specimens of the last stone taken out, to be exhibited at the legal manager's office.

ADELAIDE, FRIDAY.

Share Report.—Sales: Brokens, £188, £191; a 50th Mount Euriowies, South Tin Syndicate, £160; Block 14, £8, £8 15s.; Euriowies, £7 10s., £8 7s. 6d.; Wirralpas, 39s. 6d., 42s. 6d.; Victory, Tin, contributing, 37s. 6d.; Junctions, 31s., 33s.; Umberumberkas, o atributing, 27s., 28s.; Tributes, 26s. 6d.; Mount Carringtons, Gold, 15s. 9d., 17s.; Groupes, 14s. 9d.; Norths, 12s., 12s. 6d.; Evaleens, 8s. 9d., 11s. 6d.; Macdonnell Rubies, 7s. 7½d., 11s. 3d.; Caloolas, 6s. 6d., 8s; Victoria Crosses, 7s., 7s. 4½d.; Dreams, 6s., 6s. 6d.; Princess, 5s 4½d., 5s. 9d.; Dons, paid, 4s.; Lady Berrys, 3s. 6d., 3s. 9d.; East Almas, contributing, 3s.; Ridges, 3s., 3s. 6d.; Southern Crosses, contributing, 2s. 9d., 3s.; Kate, 2s., 2s. 4½d.

ARMIDALE, FRIDAY.

The Mount Carrington Gold Mine struck splendid stone in the winze, showing gold freely. The last fortnight's dollying from Baker's Creek Company (late Smith and party) yielded 120oz. of gold from 2½ tons of stone. The crushing machine will start next Tuesday. Two parallel reefs have been tested for 1000ft., containing from 10 to 50 ounces of stone. The Eleanora Mine sent in 120 ounces yesterday, the proceeds of the fortnight's crushing. Moore and party's mine, supposed to be the richest on the field, is still unworked, owing to law proceedings pending in the Supreme Court. Altogether mining matters are very active.

Our Barmedman correspondent telegraphs that an error appeared in our telegram from Barmedman, published on Wednesday last, in reference to alluvial prospecting. The omission of a period makes it appear that three nuggets had been obtained in a deep shaft west of Ada Hill. The nuggets were obtained at intervals in 8ft. sinking. The deep shaft is not yet bottomed. The omission of the period might cause a rush, and the insertion of the actual facts may prevent it.

BROKEN HILL, FRIDAY.

The return at the Broken Hill mine this week was:—Ore treated, 1106 tons; bullion, 249 tons; silver, 45,977oz. Leady ore is being raised, and it is not so silicious as last week. The War Dance mine has been purchased by a syndicate, and is to be worked forthwith. Mr. Patton, the new manager of the Broken Hill mine, arrived this afternoon. Mr. S. R. Wilson conducted him over the mine.

INVERELL, FRIDAY.

A largely attended meeting was held in the Town Hall last night, Mr. T. K. B. Mayne, J.P., being in the chair, to consider the advisability of assisting in forming a prospecting company. The initial step has been taken by Tingha, and delegates from that town were present, and submitted a prospectus which had been agreed to by the miners and business people of that locality. Mr. W. Litchfield, J.P., and Mr. R. Buist addressed the meeting on the subject. Mr. Munro moved a resolution in favour of the formation of a prospecting company, which was seconded by Mr. P. B. Eddy, and carried. On the motion of Mr. Jenkins, seconded by Mr. A. Oliver, the prospectus was adopted on the basis of 20,000 shares of 10s. each, 6d. on application, 6d. on allotment, and the balance in calls of not beyond 3d. per share per month, if required. Messrs. P. B. Eddy, J.P.; H. Munro, J.P.; W. Litchfield, J.P.; John Parker, and T. H. Penberthy, W. Litchfield, J.P., were appointed provisional directors, K. B. Mayne, J.P., was appointed secretary and treasurer. There is every prospect of the movement proving a great success. Over 3000 shares were taken up in the room.

MELBOURNE, FRIDAY.

Share Report.—Sales: Broken Hill Proprietary, £187, £190; Block 14, £8 7s. 6d., £8, £8 8s.; Junction, 32s., 30s.; North, 13s., 12s. 6d.; Central Broken Hill, 19s. 6d.; Pinnacle Tribute, 28s. 6d., 27s.; Dukes, 42s. 6d., 41s. 9d.

| Totals | £12,787,863 | £6,662,854 | £9,974,876 | £3,817,737 |

The total value of Imports at the port of Sydney for the week ended 24th September, 1887, amounts to £202,755, of which the principal items are:—

Apparel and drapery, £41,471; flour, £7347; gold, £33,718; hardware, £3354; kerosene, £960; malt, £930; rice, £4048; sugar, £13,790; skins and hides, £1052; tea, £12,759; tin ore, £3066; tin ingots, £11,565; timber, £3515; tobacco and cigars, £865; whisky, £1225; wool, £2067.

The total value of Exports for the same period from the port of Sydney for the week ending September 24, 1887, amounts to £199,131, of which the principal items are:—

Bacon, £1530; boots, £1436; books, £2098; coal, £5307; coin, £31,135; copra, £2190; copper, £14,463; drapery, £3159; flour, £39910; hardware, £3449; live stock, £1360; leather, £1551; meats, £3036; jewellery, £3840; sugar, £1358; skins, £4521; spirits, £1188; tallow, £761.9; tin, £26,300; wool, £63,994.

THE WOOL TRADE.

The cable messages of the week are certainly anything but cheerful reading to those having wool for disposal at these sales, and, judging from private advices to hand the last few days, it is in some quarters conjectured that a perusal of the catalogues when they reach us will show that the decline reported is far from being overestimated. It is not easy to assign an adequate cause for this persistent tendency to lower values. Possibly one reason may be found in the fact that manufacturers, learning from correspondents on this side that the incoming clip is likely to prove so much superior to its predecessors, prefer to wait for it rather than go on purchasing old wool, seeing that there will be a fair quantity of the new clip arriving in time for the November sales. It must not either be overlooked that manufacturers operating in the colonies promptly will be in receipt of regular shipments shortly after the middle of November and onwards, so that in their case, at any rate, the necessity to lay in large stocks during the current series is by no means pressing.

At Adelaide further sales took place on the 21st instant, and are reported on as follows:—To-day Messrs. Luxmoor and Co. held their opening wool sales. There was a good attendance of buyers; 1700 were offered. The bidding was not very brisk, and many lines were withdrawn. Wool from the Darling and Murray district, in fair condition, and sound well-grown Northern wools, rather heavy, fetched the highest prices. Greasy were 8½d.; scoured merinos, 14½d; scoured, 11d. At the New Zealand Company's sale 1000 bales of greasy scoured were offered. There was a good attendance of foreign and local buyers, and competition was good. Medium qualities of wool were depressed, and prices showed about ½d. decline upon current rates in November last. Scoured hoggets secured the top price of 14d.; scoured wool, 13½d. For medium greasy there was a good demand. The quotations for super greasy merino were 7d. to 8d.; medium ditto, 6d.; pieces, 4d. to 6d.

In Melbourne, the opening sale, as stated in our last, is fixed for next Wednesday, when Messrs. R. Goldsbrough and Co. will offer their catalogue.

The only feature in our market calling for special attention is a sale by Messrs. J. H. Geddes and Co., who report having sold about 200 bales, being first consignment of W E and Co. over O REEL clip (from North Western district), consisting of about 1800 bales, at a satisfactory figure. A few small catalogues are likely to be offered during the coming week, but no parcels of importance will be submitted.

The following are the brands of portions of clips which have been taken into store during the past week:—WHP Greenbank over JOW, MR over New Gulargambone, AIB over Namoi, GR over Tenandra, W. Martin over Mudgee, EJL over Birriwa, Melrose Plains, FAX in diamond over Mudgee, T over diamond conjoined, J.M'M over Weetalabah, A B Bros. over Narraway, F P over Gapview, JS over H over MDC, JW over Springvill, RED, JC over Kialgara, RCC over Mulga, LL, TH over R over Barwon, JK over S, JR over Kaytown, EW over PP, PW, Quandong, JP, EJ over Cadelle, EW over Alvanor, Mount Brandon, GAC over WGRN, Heart over Lansdowne, MCL over Florida, R Cox over Woodpark, WOM, P'MM over Genamoney, Billabong over RIC, I, TPF over Narraway, PS over Bogan, Jones over Merrigal, PFG, G&R over W, DI over B, Weelong, Cooraburrama over WB, BRN in diamond, C Bros over Beir, AH over Molun, JB conjoined over Brindley Park, B&T over Celony, Elwood, MAB over Neimby, JH over Beanba, D&M over Bulgan dramine, Tabratong, M&Co over Goorianawa, Bimble over WGT, Calga, RBS over Corumbi, C in diamond, JS, Griggs, Li. over Namoi, Howlong, Curlew Park, Brongella, Murril Creek.

The arrivals by rail and sea continue to increase, and this week amount to 15,885 bales, as against 9793 bales for the corresponding week of last year.

Exports include the cargoes of six vessels, taking 17,400 bales, as under:—

Compared with the two previous years, the exports to present time from New South South Wales are:—

| 1887-8. | 1886-7. | 1885-6. |
|---|---|---|
| 31,822 | 22,000 | 26,526 |

showing an increase of 9822 bales over last year, and 6296 bales above the season of 1885-6.

Sheepskins.—The market is not so active as it has been, and prices show a further decline. The following are the latest quotations:—Butchers' green skins, full-woolled, 40d. to 48d.; three-quarter woolled, 33d. to 39d.; half-woolled, 24d. to 30d.

PRODUCE MARKET—FRIDAY.

Good supplies of forage and wood were submitted this morning at Darling Harbour terminus. The sales were fairly attended by the trade. The inquiry for forage was almost exclusively for the best lots, but for lower descriptions it was languid. Values were unaltered. In wood no change is recorded, business remaining slack. At the wharfs average quantities were forward from Northern and Southern rivers and adjacent colonies. Business, as usual at the close of the month, was quiet, and transactions were only for the day's requirements. Onions were slightly firmer, but otherwise late ruling rates were maintained. At Darling Harbour sales the following values were realised:—

Wood.—Ironbark, 7s 6d to 10s; bundle, 7s to 12s; loot, 9s to 12s 6d; bakers', 8s to 10s 6d.

Hay.—Fair consignments. Competition was chiefly confined to the best lots, whilst for other descriptions, especially inferior samples, it was very slack. Oaten, in bundles, 5s 5d to 6s 10d per cwt.; off qualities, 4s 6d to 5s; oaten and wheaten, in bundles, 5s to 6s 10d.

Straw.—Short arrivals. Clean, in bundles, at 1s 9d to 2s 1d per cwt.

Chaff.—Excepting for good lines, buyers' demands were restricted. Oaten, in bags, 5s to 4s 7d per cwt.

At the wharfs the following were the wholesale quotations:—

Maize.—In addition to the local supplies a quantity of South African maize is also on hand, for which 3s 6d per bushel is asked.

River samples at 3s 9d per bushel.

Oats.—Unaltered. Good bright heavy feed descriptions steady at 2s 1d to 2s 3d per bushel; medium and dark lines very weak from 1s 11d; seed, to 2s 3d.

Barley.—Best Cape seed is still nominally worth 3s to 3s 3d per bushel.

Bran.—Quoted, at 7½d to 8d per bushel.

Pollard.—In little more inquiry to 8d per bushel.

Flour.—Fairly large shipments from the Hunter River this morning. Trade is unimproved. Prime lucerne commands the greatest attention, at £3 15s to £3 per ton; other classes are nominal from 30s.

Chaff.—Stocks replenished from the neighbouring colonies last night. Best Victorian and Adelaide parcels, £4 15s to £5 per ton; inferior is neglected.

STOCK, STATION, AND PRODUCE REPORTS.

Tallow.—Messrs. Brunker and Wolfe, J. H. Geddes and Co., Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, Limited, Mort and Co., Limited, F. L. Barker, Hill, Clark, and Co., and J. Bridge report holding sales yesterday. 748 packages were offered, and 531 sold publicly. The market continues quiet. Shippers operated sparingly. Trade lots were again weak. Quotations—Best beef, £17 5s to £15 17s per ton; medium, £16 to £17; mixed and station, from £14; inferior, from £12; best mutton, to £18 10s.

Hides.—4626 were offered and 5643 sold at yesterday's sales. A strong demand was noticeable throughout sales and values rulled firm. Some descriptions advanced ½d to ¾d per lb., especially good heavies. Quotations:—Extra heavy, in good condition, 3¾d to 4d per lb., exceptional lots to 4¼d; heavies, 3½d to 3¾d; medium, 3¼d to 3½d; light and dry, 3½d to 4¼d; horsehides in request, 4s to 7s 6d; yearlings, 4s to 9s; calfskins, 1s 3d to 3s 6d.

Marsupial Skins.—Large catalogues of all descriptions were offered yesterday at auction, by Messrs. Harrison, Jones, and Devlin, Limited, and Brunker and Wolfe. They report large sizes kangaroo were again weaker; other sorts unaltered. Small skins were only in restricted request. Quotations:—Extra large kangaroo, 100s to 105s per dozen; very large, 75s to 90s; large, 56s to 64s; fair, 40s to 50s; medium, 30s to 38s; small, 12s to 24s; very small, 1s to 9s; good wallaby was quitted readily at 8s to 10s; fair, 4s to 6s; small, 2s to 3s; scrub, 1s to 3s; well furred opossum skins were in strong demand at 8s to 10s; medium, 4s to 5s 6d; rumpers, 2s to 3s.

Hair.—Inquiry is still maintained at 13d to 15d per lb. for horsetail; mane, 12d; cow-washed, 10d to 11d; dirty, 6d to 9d; stumps from 3½d; mixed, 11d to 13d.

Horns and Bones.—The former continued to sell readily at 25s to 34s per 100 for large and well cared for lots; medium, 12s 6d to 24s; small, 6s to 10s. Tips from 2s 6d. Bones are quiet at £5 10s to £6 per ton for best shanks; faulty from £3 10s. Common bones, £3. Hoofs, £2.

Leather.—The business transacted at Tuesday's sales was on a very limited scale. Sole is still in request for local requirements, owing to the absence of shippers. Kip and tweed are slow of sale. Harness lines continue inactive. Basils are in ample supply, and the demand is limited. Quotations: Sole, extra heavy, 11d to 12d; medium, 8d to 8½d. Kip, best, 15d to 16d; medium, 12½d to 14d. Cow tweed, 18d to 24d; heavy, 15s to 16d. Calf tweed, 18d to 22d; harness, 12½d to 14s; bag, 9s to 11s; bridle, 9s to 11s 9d.

Horses.—The market during the week has been supplied from country districts, the town, and suburbs. A strong demand exists for stock suitable for light harness work and also active and heavy draught, chiefly the latter. Quotations: Superior saddle and harness horses, £25 to £33; exceptional, to £60; ordinary, £10 to £18; active van and draught stock, £14 to £26; heavy draught, to £35.

Store Cattle.—Moderate demand for store bullocks. On Victorian border quotations are 105s to 110s; in western districts, 95s to 97s 6d.

Store Sheep.—Not much doing. Wethers worth 5s 6d to 5s 9d; mixed weaners, 7s; young ewes, 9s to 10s.

Stations.—Enquiries noticed for compact well-secured station properties.

CAST your MEMORY back to the OLDEN DAYS of SYDNEY and reflect upon the rapid progress it has made.
See how the city has been built up.
Observe how the suburbs have advanced and how soon the open PADDOCKS have been converted into fine SUBURBAN TOWNS, thickly populated, and beautifully strewn with handsome VILLAS and lovely BUSINESS PREMISES.
And yet all this PROGRESS has been made in a FEW SHORT YEARS, and within the recollection of those who to-day are yet only in the PRIME of LIFE.
Doubtless such progress is amazing, but nevertheless it is predicted, and rightly so too, that PERTH, the CAPITAL CITY of WESTERN AUSTRALIA, will eclipse SYDNEY in speedy progress, and its suburbs will advance by LEAPS and BOUNDS.
EXTRACT FROM THE PERTH DAILY NEWS.
"During the last two years the city has been rapidly increasing, both in population and in size. Houses have sprung up with almost mushroom rapidity in the outskirts, and places which but a short time ago were wastes covered with scrub, now form the sites of comfortable residences, while streets, which but a few months ago were 'streets' only in name, are now really busy thoroughfares, bordered on each side by rows of inhabited houses."
The HORDERN PARK ESTATE is in the vicinity alluded to, about half a mile from the CITY BOUNDARY, and the MAIN NORTH BEACH-ROAD.
Is subdivided into fine BLOCKS, suitable for the immediate erection of RESIDENCES, large or small, and for which a speedy sale or tenancy is readily obtained.
These BLOCKS are are only £10 each; £1 is the deposit required, and 5s per month keeps the payment going.
A FREE DEED is given with 5 BLOCKS, and the TITLE is TORRENS'.
The Agents, TATE and CO., of 158, PITT-STREET, (over Washington Soul's) with the PLAN of THE ESTATE, issue a nicely prepared PAMPHLET on the PROGRESS of AUSTRALIA'S CITIES gratis, and they invite correspondence and inquiry on Western Australia generally.

PICKED BLOCK of 101 Acres 3 Roods 37 Perches.
Lot 3.—Southern division of famous Subdivision of late Rev. J. J. Therry's Grant—only a few hundred yards from the new and useful Public Wharf erected by the Government, who are also about to form the road up to the boundary point of this land. It is well-known as Mr. Crespin's block, chosen with good judgment for position and soil. It is all fenced, and on it are store, cottage, schoolroom, &c.; here and there are a few acres cleared and all ready for planting. Streets have been marked off through it for prospective subdivision, and in the near future, by the many charming features of the district, coupled with easy travelling facilities,
SETTLEMENT WILL BE HERE,
and prices very manifestly enhance. The sale of this intact Block is recommended to the notice of all of above classes of buyers as a chance affording the opportunity to acquire and soon realise at a handsome profit.
Vendor is out of the colony, and his representative desires to sell.
TERMS WILL BE LIBERAL.
Mr. ——— is in charge of the property, and will give every information to inquirers.

RICHARDSON and WRENCH have received instructions to sell by PUBLIC AUCTION, at the ROOMS, PITT-STREET, on FRIDAY, 7th October, at 11 o'clock, ESTATE of the LATE ROBERT HAWORTH, Esq.

GRAND ESTATE near DAPTO, and Railway Station Site.

SPLENDID SITUATION and SOIL.

THAT HIGHLY-IMPROVED AND RENOWNED ESTATE,
KEMBLA GRANGE,
in area
487 ACRES 3 ROODS,
on the Dapto-road, about six miles from the Town of Wollongong.

NINE FARMS, 40 ACRES to 100 ACRES EACH.
Also,
1-ACRE LOTS.
Subdivision at a proposed RAILWAY PLATFORM.

Apart from the worth of the property as a letting concern, on which there have been tenants of long standing who have worked it most successfully, it must be viewed as a BEAUTIFUL ESTATE,
enjoying one of the most picturesque situations in this CELEBRATED DISTRICT, noted for the STRIKING SCENERY
which abounds therein. KEMBLA GRANGE does not suffer in this respect by any competitor. The advent of the railway into this pretty healthy district will materially serve to attract a number of our citizens to settle there, in which case values will largely enhance.

COOK'S RIVER-ROAD.

BUSINESS SITES.

UNDER TORRENS' TITLE.

Adjacent to Bank, Post-office, Hotel, and Church.

With 5 minutes' walk of 2 railway stations,
2 lines of 'buses passing the property.

ELEVATED LAND,
situate on the main road, at commanding corners.

THE VERY PICK OF THE LOCALITY.

BOYD and KING have received instructions from M. METCALFE, Esq., to sell by public auction, on the Ground, without reserve, A MOST DESIRABLE PROPERTY, consisting of main-road business sites, in the rapidly-improving and thickly-populated district of St. Peters, being the continuation of that business centre and suburb of Newtown, on the main road leading to Sydney's popular resorts of health and recreation.

This property offers incalculable inducements to investors and business men to secure valuable building sites for shops, stores, and factories in this desirable district, in close proximity to the metropolis, and having such exceptional facilities for continuous and speedy transit.

Immense and important improvements are now being carried out at Cook's River by the Government, in making the river navigable from the Pacific Ocean via that historical harbour of Botany Bay, the placid and refreshing waters of which can be viewed from the elevated altitude of this property.

An almost magical change is apparent in this picturesque river by the construction of extensive embankments extending some thousands of feet, on which, before many months are passed, wharfs and landing, for the accommodation of shipping, will be erected, thus making Cook's River-road, thence via Newtown to Sydney, the main artery for the transit of merchandise and produce from our extensive coastal trade.

Adjacent to the property which the auctioneers are instructed to sell, will be the proposed site for a Public Park and Recreation Ground, and the dense population of St. Peters, Newtown, Cook's River, Arncliffe, Tempe, and surroundings, promise enormous scope for the development of the district for business purposes.

The enormous increase in the value of land in all parts of Newtown, and the establishment of the district on a firm and substantial basis of prosperity during the last few years, should be sufficient inducement to convince those seeking for profitable investments of the certainty of large returns to all securing real estate in this locality.

The immediate surroundings of the property are of a superior description, and the Villa Residences and mansions of Sydney merchants and business men, vastly enhance the popularity of the district and intrinsic value of freehold property in the nature of investment.

The Auctioneers' instructions are TO SELL WITHOUT RESERVE,
on most liberal terms,
THE ABOVE VALUABLE BUSINESS SITES,
at Public Auction, on the Ground,
on SATURDAY, Oct. 8th, at 3 p.m.

Plans are in course of preparation, and may be obtained in a few days from

TENNYSON,
facing the Championship Course, Parramatta River, containing 6800 feet of DEEP WATER FRONTAGES, with NO RESERVATIONS.

The above valuable property has been suitably subdivided into most desirable VILLA SITES, with frontages varying from 60ft. to 100ft., by depths ranging up to 320ft. It is well known that at the present time it is almost impossible to purchase frontages to the harbour, and the same remark applies to nearly all the desirable points on the Parramatta River, those fortunate holders who possess them knowing too well the value of such frontages to dispose of them at any price.

The TENNYSON ESTATE, therefore, presents an opportunity perhaps never to be met again for lovers of the picturesque to secure a site which cannot be surpassed for a SUBURBAN RESIDENCE.

TENNYSON is easy of access by river, road, and rail, and the tramway to Ryde (which has been decided upon) will pass right through the property. A New Wharf has been erected at Tennyson Point, exactly between Gladesville and Putney, to and from which the Parramatta boats ply regularly from 6.30 a.m. to 11.15 p.m., and 'buses pass the Estate. Ryde railway station is within 15 minutes' walk of the Estate.
THE TITLE WILL BE TORRENS'.
TERMS—Only £5 per cent. deposit; balance by instalments to suit purchasers.

Buyers desirous of paying cash will receive a DISCOUNT of 2½ PER CENT. if paid WITHIN ONE MONTH, and those wishing to receive the convenience of DEFERRED PAYMENTS may obtain this for a period extending over TEN YEARS. Interest calculated on unpaid balances at half-yearly rests at the rate of SIX PER CENT. ONLY, and the COMPANY will make LIBERAL ADVANCES to BUILD.

BATT, RODD, and PURVES will sell the above desirable ESTATE, ON THE GROUND, TO-DAY.
Free steamers leave King-street wharf at 2.15 p.m.
Descriptive Illustrative Pamphlets, Lithographs, and Tickets can be obtained on application to the Auctioneers.
Messrs. BATT, RODD, and PURVES, 88, Pitt-street;
